Ottawa Subpoenas Law Society Books In Probe of Ad Ban

In an historic move, the Canadian Restrictive Trade Practices Commission this week started an investigation of law society prohibitions against lawyers advertising their services and fees to the public.

The Law Society of British Columbia has been ordered by the commission to surrender a number of internal documents, society treasurer and chief elected official Mary Southin told the annual meeting in Victoria Thursday night.

The action of the commission, a federal agency under the Combines Investigation Act, is seen by many in the legal profession as a direct challenge to their right to regulate their own affairs.

A subpoena was served on the society, returnable May 29 at the Vancouver office of the federal deparment of consumer and corporate affairs.

"I consider this subpoena a gross attack on the profession and a gross invasion of provincial rights," Southin said. She described it as tantamount to blackmail.

Southin said the Law Society, the lawyers' professional body incorporated under B.C. law, will fight this matter to the utmost and has engaged Vancouver lawyer Michael Goldie to represent it.

In an interview, she said she expects the society will commence an action in court to prevent the matter going any further on the ground that it is unconstitutional under the British North America Act.

The subpoena demands the production of such things as a list of the benchers, committees and rules of the society plus all letters, memoranda, notices and the citations issued by the society to lawyers Victor Stephens of Victoria (who is also the leader of the Conservative party in B.C. and MLA for Oak Bay) and Donald Jabour of North Vancouver.

Both lawyers were cited for conduct unbecoming a member of the society, a reprimand that will be included in their conduct record.

Stephens was cited for public interviews shortly after his new practice opened in Vancouver in 1977. Although he did not seek out the media or blatantly advertise, he did detail the new operation, its methods and fee structure when questioned by reporters.

He said later that the case against him threatened freedom of the press and would strongly inhibit freedom of speech, adding that there is a curtain of fear preventing many lawyers from speaking out on major issues involving the profession.

Jabour was accused of conduct unbecoming a member of the society after placing four newspaper advertisements announcing the opening of his North Vancouver legal clinic this year and quoting a sample price list and services offered in the ads and on an illuminated sign outside the clinic.

Jabour contended that advertising does not constitute conduct unbecoming to a society member and that society strictures on advertising are a contravention of the Combines Act.

However, said Southin, "We will have to see if the constitution of Canada protects the Law Society from the mandarins from Ottawa.

"There is in this sort of thing an implication that members of the bar . . . have less concern for public interest than politicians and civil servants, and that proposition I do not accept."

Poor Interest Of Bureaucrats Loses Interest

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal treasury loses an incalculable amount, possibly millions, in potential interest every year because civil servants collecting money from citizens don't put it in the bank fast enough, the Commons public accounts committee was told Thursday.

R. M. Dubois, assistant auditor-general, said during discussion of lax government money handling that many civil servants have shown a "definite lack of interest" when it comes to banking public money.

A study of a handful of government departments showed that money collected for various reasons often wasn't deposited for up to two weeks — in one case 28 days.

Since the government collects an average of $300 million a day, any delay in depositing meant substantial amounts of lost interest. Dubois noted that daily interest on $1 billion is about $219,000. The government ran a daily cash balance of between $1.2 billion and $4.6 billion, with yearly cash receipts of about $75 billion.

Treasury board regulations say civil servants collecting $100 or more are supposed to put it in the bank the same day they receive it. But Dubois said many send the money to central agencies or department headquarters for deposit, meaning a delay in the time the money could be earning interest.

TRAVEL FUND JUST A LOAN?

OTTAWA (CP) — The auditor-general has caught some civil servants using standing travel advances as virtual interest-free personal loans, the Commons public accounts committee learned today.

Spot checks in six government departments during 1975-76 showed an estimated $250,000 in travel advances were in the hands of civil servants when they shouldn't have been, R. M. Dubois, assistant auditor-general, told the committee.

The funds were being used in certain cases "almost like personal loans without interest."

Treasury board officials explained that civil servants who travel a great deal are given travel funds which they can draw on without going through the time-consuming process of applying for, and receiving approval for trips and expenses.

New rules required those given such funds to account for their travel within the first 10 days of each month.

Dubois, who studied government travel claims for the auditor-general, said most regulations affecting travelling civil servants have been "inconsistently applied or substantially ignored."

Moro Killer Hunt Nabs 2

ROME (Reuter) — Police have made two more arrests in their search for the Red Brigades killers of former premier Aldo Moro.

The arrests, in Turin Thursday night, came only hours after police here announced they arrested 10 persons, including a blonde woman they said fitted the description of a woman seen leaving the car in which Moro's bullet-riddled body was found on May 9.

Rome Police Chief Emmanuele de Francesco told a news conference that police, in three days of secret operations, also found two suspected Red Brigades hideouts — an apartment and a printing shop.

He said material found at the hideouts included an electric typewriter of the kind used by the guerrillas to write communiques and a printing press.

The police chief said some of those arrested may be Red Brigades supporters rather than members.

Meanwhile, a Rome newspaper says Italy's secret service believes Moro gave his Red Brigades captors political and military secrets and this has caused alarm in NATO.

ROAD BLOCK PROTEST

REVELSTOKE (CP) - A woman caused a one-hour traffic jam Wednesday when she parked her car across Highway 23 to protest road delays caused by B.C. Hydro's work on the Revelstoke Dam.

Betty Bush, who lives in Mica Creek, about 130 kilometres from her work here, said she was protesting a 7 a.m. road closure which forces her to leave her home at 5:30 a.m. to be at work at 9 a.m.

Separatist . . . At Midnight

QUEBEC (CP) — Are Quebecers really more "separatist" at midnight?

Finance Minister Jacques Parizeau thinks so.

He was questioned in the national assembly Thursday on statements he allegedly made during a tour of European financial capitals last December.

Liberal House leader Jean-Noel Lavoie read from a memo which he said circulated among Euorpean bankers at the time of Parizeau's visit.

"Regarding independence, the minister refused to make any predictions concerning the referendum which his government had deliberately postponed until 1980, stating jocularly that Quebecers are resolutely separatist at midnight, after a good dinner, but rather calm and pro-federalist at dawn, the morning after, when comes time to go to work."

Asked if he had truly said that, Parizeau beamed.

"Mr. Speaker," he said, "one of the reasons I can toss off such quips is that I have repeated them about 25 times.

Father Gets Injunction Against Abortion

LONDON (AP) — A British high court, in what is believed to be an unprecedented legal action, has granted an interim injunction asked by a husband seeking to prevent his wife from having an abortion.

"I feel that the baby is half mine and I should have the right to say what happens to it," William Paton told reporters. "I want that baby more than anything on this earth."

On Wednesday, Paton's lawyers went to a judge in Liverpool, near the steelworker's home in northwest England, seeking an injunction to prevent Paton's 29-year-old wife Joan from having the abortion which she informed her husband she planned to have. The judge granted the interim injunction and ordered a full hearing of the case next Wednesday.

The day her husband went to court Mrs. Paton moved out of the couple's home, went to stay with her parents and instructed a lawyer to start divorce proceedings. The couple has been married four years and has no children.

Norman Jones, Mrs. Paton' lawyer, said: "She is not in good health and it is because of her health that she wants to have this abortion. Until we have thoroughly discussed the significance of the pending injunction she is taking no action."

Troops Discover 44 Dead

Times News Services

KINSHASA — French paratroops dropped into the Zaire mining centre of Kolwezi today and discovered the bodies of at least 44 Europeans executed by rebels, the official news agency AZAP said.

The agency said the Foreign Legion troops were encountering heavy resistance as they attempted to clear the town of rebel pockets in their bid to rescue an estimated 3,000 whites.

Zaire Foreign Minister Umba Di Lutete said the rebel troops had been ordered to massacre the whites they were holding hostage. One radio report said the rebels were ordered to behead them.

AZAP said many of the Europeans appeared to have been shot earlier today, shortly before the paratroopers arrived. U.S. Air Force transport planes began landing in Zaire soon afterwards on a support mission.

Earlier, a French radio report said the paratroopers, reported to number between 600 and 700, jumped on Kolwezi with orders "to act like legionnaires" and clear buildings one-by-one. In Lusaka, Zambia, diplomatic sources said the French were dropped over the European residential area of Kolwezi.

A Zaire radio broadcast reported in Washington said the leader of the invasion forces had called for the destruction of the mining facility in Kolwezi and the "beheading" of the white population.

In Washington, the White House announced that U.S. Air Force C-141 cargo planes are being used to airlift French and Belgian military equipment into Zaire.

White House Press Secretary Jody Powell said the airlift now in progress involves a total of 18 planes, flown by U.S. crews. He said the transports are being used to carry ammunition, fuel, trucks and drivers to areas in Zaire "outside the area of conflict."

Meanwhile, President Fidel Castro summoned the highest-ranking U.S. diplomat in Cuba for a meeting this week to deny that his nation is involved in the rebel war in Zaire, it was reported today.

The New York Times said Castro met Wednesday night with Lyle F. Lane, the chief U.S. diplomat in Havana working at the American interest section under the Swiss embassy.

New Banking Proposals Get B.C's Approval

Times News Services

New banking proposals outlined by the federal government Thursday are a step in the right direction, says Rafe Mair, British Columbia's consumer and corporate affairs minister.

Mair, who has been critical of large chartered banks, said in an interview he is encouraged with the proposals which relax the restrictions on new banks being established in Canada and with the stronger measures to ensure bank directors are not in conflict-of-interest situations.

He said, however, he is concerned about proposals affecting near-banks, such as credit unions.

Mair said there is a tendency for such institutions to lose their local identity when plugged into a clearing house system, as suggested by Ottawa.

The proposals, which would change the rules governing the banking industry for the next 10 years, were introduced in the Commons Thursday.

First responses were generally favorable among the companies that will be most affected.

But what all this means to the consumer isn't yet clear.

Food Case Cheques Surface

The research co-ordinator for the legislature's inquiry into food prices says he has evidence of chain supermarket practices that if put before the public now would drive some people out of business.

Robin Smith said he has cancelled cheques, but cautioned that it will be up to the attorney-general's ministry to decide whether they establish any illegality.

Alex Macdonald (NDP—Vancouver-East) had told the legislature that Smith had cancelled cheques that are evidence of kickback payments.

Opposition MLAs have demanded a public inquiry into kickback and payoff schemes which some reports say add as much as 15 per cent to the cost of food in B.C.

Vancouver-Burrard NDP MLA Norm Levi said Thursday that the B.C. Broiler Marketing Board paid about $5,800 to large B.C. food retailers between February and May.

"The whole issue has been known for a long time," Levi later told reporters.

"Nobody wants to talk about it."

Smith declined to identify who turned in the cheques and to whom they were payable.

"They don't establish in my own mind any illegality . . . there's a big difference between illegality and immorality," said Smith.

He said he also has evidence other than the cheques but declined to disclose it even to committee members at this stage.

"If we took some of that stuff around now some people would be out of business," he said.

Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Rafe Mair said earlier this week that if supermarket chains are accepting kickbacks no provincial laws were broken and it would be a matter for the federal Combines Investigation Act.

Smith said Mair doesn't know what evidence has been uncovered because the inquiry's staff reports to the legislature's standing committee on agriculture and not to the minister.

"There's no way we would show any evidence even to the committee members until we are ready to present our report," he said. "It (the evidence) all has to be weighed."

What may be a perfectly legitimate business practice could be viewed as a crime in

METERING UNITY

MONTREAL (UPI) — The federal government has found a new tool to promote Canadian unity — the postage meter.

The Post Office this week was mailing out an appeal for users of postage meters to buy and use a new meter die bearing the unity theme, "Canada, it's you and me — Canada, c'est toi et moi".

Enclosed was a postage-free ordering card.

NOT ENOUGH COOKS

There were two Capt. Cooks on the Princess Marguerite's summer inaugural run from Seattle today — but that was because the other three couldn't make it.

Captain Cook Bicentennial committee chairman Ed Sweeney today said there are now five Capt. Cooks welcoming tourists to British Columbia because there was too much work for one man.

Kelvin Andrew is still the main man, he said, but Roland Hunter of Vancouver, who placed second in the competition for the job, has also been hired. Both were aboard the Marguerite today along with a full load of dignitaries.

The other Capt. Cooks have been hired in Port Alberni, Kelowna and in the Kootenays.

"It's a little bit like having a Santa Claus on every corner but we just had to do it," Sweeney said.

"There were so many requests for him we couldn't meet the demand so now we have five."

Ottawa Still Firm On Que. Tax Plan

OTTAWA (CP) - The federal government stood firm on its Quebec sales tax proposals Thursday in the face of another storm of opposition criticism in the Commons, while the controversy spread elsewhere in the country.

Quebec Finance Minister Jacques Parizeau, condemned by the federal government for rejecting Ottawa's idea of an $85 federal income tax rebate as a settlement of the sales tax dispute with the province, was the centre of criticism here and in Toronto.

At the same time the government was under continued Opposition attack, with the New Democrats making a formal attempt to halt consideration of the legislation instituting taxation measures of the April 10 budget, including sales tax cuts.

NDP Leader Ed Broadbent went so far as to call the separatist Parti Quebecois government good federalists for its cutting of the Quebec eight-per-cent sales tax on selected goods and calling for federal subsidy of the move.

Ontario Premier William Davis accused Parizeau of being "illogical, nonsensical and less than accurate" in his suggestion that the federal budget was designed to save the Ontario government from the consequences of its unpopular budget.

Davis was responding to Parizeau's statement Wednesday in the national assembly that the federal government decided to subsidize provincial sales tax cuts because the Ontario government had just raised its taxes by $350 million and needed some pallative for its taxpayers.

the public's view, Smith added.

Norm Duce, a consultant to the inquiry, said earlier that a report now being prepared on the kickback allegations, initially reported by the news media, would be of considerable interest to the public.

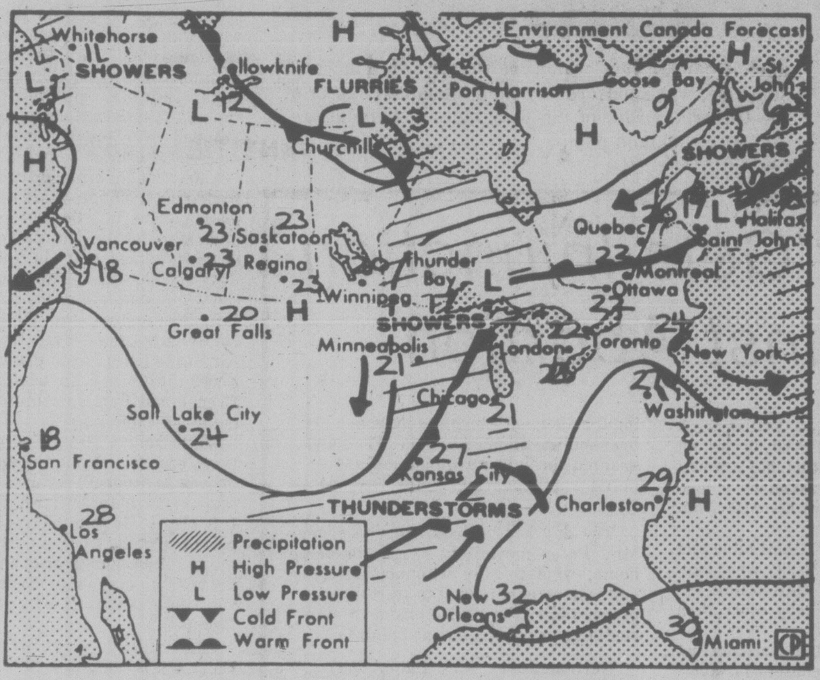
Committee chairman Len Bawtree has said the research report will be available to the committee and once approved by it the report will be filed in the legislature — in effect, making it public.

Duce said initially that it was projected the report would be ready in three weeks but following a committee request for a speed-up, efforts are being made to get it out sooner.

Meanwhile, the Toronto-based Retail Council of Canada, representing supermarkets, issued a statement saying recent attacks on "the long-standing and completely legal practices of commercial discounts and allowances" in the food industry reflect a misunderstanding of their purpose and effect.

The only specific allowances referred to in the statement were volume discounts or rebates and co-operative advertising or merchandising allowances.

It made no mention of payments for shelf space or of secret contributions to the cost of advertising.



Map valid until midday Saturday

A stout ridge across the southern half of the province is keeping the sky completely clear to the south of a threatening frontal system stalled on the north coast. The front is producing some light rain. Wisps of high cloud are starting to drift southwards from the frontal zone which will reach southern B.C. as a narrow band of clouds on Saturday, resulting in a few showers along the outer coast as it passes. Cool air behind the front will produce variable cloud and cooler temperatures for the balance of the holiday weekend.

Mountie Backed Break-Ins But Had Them Stopped

OTTAWA (CP) — RCMP Commissioner R. H. Simmonds maintained Thursday that "surreptitious entries" by Mounties acting without warrants aren't illegal.

However, he said, he ordered them stopped last September because they were reaching dangerous proportions.

Simmonds was replying to questions by Stuart Leggatt (NDP—New Westminster) at a session of the Commons justice committee.

Simmonds was commanding officer of the Lower Mainland RCMP division in British Columbia in 1975-76 when some of the investigations occurred.

"A commanding officer would have no awareness at all of many of these cases," Simmonds said.

He said the entries were regarded as legal because "for breaking and entering to be illegal, it must be accompanied by intent" to commit a crime.

Leggatt asked whether Mountries are trained in "housebreaking procedures."

"I'm not going to discuss in any depth techniques," the commissioner replied.

He said that two East Indian girls "buried alive" beneath a garage floor in Burnaby were found because of "a surreptitious entry" into the garage by a policeman.

When Simmonds said many of the intelligence "probes," which are called "fishing expeditions" within the force, were aimed at drug cases, Leggatt asked why the investigators didn't use writs of assistance. Such writs give the officer who holds one power to enter any place at any time.

Simmonds said many officers don't have writs, the number in use is declining, and "this has caused us some difficulty." There was "far too great a restriction on writs."

No Porn Alarm

OTTAWA (CP) — RCMP Commissioner R. H. Simmonds said Thursday there isn't "any high degree of alarm" about pornography in Canada.

Simmonds was testifying before the Commons justice committee, which spent the winter studying girlie magazines and so-called marital aids and concluded that tougher laws are needed to control an industry the MPs linked with organized crime.

But Simmonds categorized police investigation of pornography as wasted time. Courts rarely convict, he said, and this reflects public feeling on the issue.

"The law isn't that bad," the commissioner said of present obscenity sections of the Criminal Code. "What has to happen is that the Canadian people have to get mad."

At present, he added, "there is no consensus on what is right or wrong in these moralistic areas."

Workers Gassed

PORT ALBERNI (CP) — Nine workers at MacMillan Bloedel Ltd.'s pulp and paper division here were treated at hospital Thursday and released after a chlorine gas leak in the kraft mill.

A company spokesman said five workers were treated for exposure to chlorine gas and four others observed before being released.

Cause of the leak was being investigated.

Secret Solicitor . . .

TORONTO (CP) — Mr. Justice Allen Linden of the Ontario Supreme Court Thursday banned the publication of the name of a man who was charged with soliciting a decoy prostitute in midtown Toronto.

John Lamont, lawyer for the man from the Metropolitan Toronto area, said the man's wife, children, friends and employers don't know about the charge.

Lamont said there was no precedent for asking the court to order the name of a person charged with a criminal offence not to be published.

He said publishing the man's name might cause him to have a nervous breakdown, wreck his long marriage and cause him to lose his job.

Mr. Justice Linden, in making his decision, said:

"The name of the person is really totally irrelevant to the whole proceeding.

"It is not the accused alone who is affected by the publishing of his name, but his family; and if the case receives publicity, it will be known that he is the accused."

The man went to court without a lawyer earlier this year and wanted to plead guilty, but the trial judge persuaded him to plead not guilty.

The judge acquitted the man on the grounds that the Criminal Code does not prohibit soliciting by a man seeking a prostitute's services.

Not Yet Irrevocable

With little fanfare Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis introduced in the legislature earlier this week a couple of major changes to the Municipal Act, buried among the dozens of housekeeping amendents added to the act annually. Although the changes have not as yet attracted much public attention, they should be carefully considered by every B.C. citizen, for, if passed, they will significantly affect all municipal government in the province.

The first change deals with the method of choosing regional board representatives from incorporated municipalities. Under the amendments, B.C. will go back to the old system of having each municipal council appoint, from among its own members, its delegates to the regional board. This system was in use for several years in the late 1960s and early '70s, but was changed in 1973 so that voters directly elected their regional board representatives, provided only that those elected to the regional board had also to be properly elected mayors or aldermen.

Curtis is quite right in saying that the new system hasn't worked well. Voters have been hopelessly confused by the new regional board ballot tacked on to the back of their municipal voting package, and it is nothing short of absurd that persons can win one election (for regional board) but still not get to take their seats because they lost another (for their municipal council).

The problem with Curtis's solution, however, is that the old system didn't work very well either — that was why it was changed in the first place. Municipal voters felt no loyalty at all to their regional districts because they had no real input into the governing of them. Parochialism ran rampant on the boards because, having no mandate other than that of being appointed by their own councils, municipal delegates felt they must protect the interests of their own municipalities at all costs, regardless of what was best for the region as a whole. In some cases, individual mayors were able to exercise considerable control over entire regional boards by appointing delegates who shared their own views, whether or not those views were representative of the general position of council.

Curtis has already had working for several months a public inquiry into all aspects of regional government. It is most peculiar that he insisted on introducing this change now, rather than waiting for the inquiry report. Then he might have had available to him some new options for choosing regional board members, rather than being forced to decide between two alternatives, neither of which has worked in the past.

The second major change in the act is one allowing municipal councils to pass zoning and land-use bylaws by a simple majority rather than requiring a two-thirds majority as is now the case. Curtis describes this change as "more democratic" and, on the surface, it is.

But there are some excellent reasons for retaining the current system. The chief of these is the fact that so many land-use decisions made by councils are irrevocable. If a mistake is made, there is, in many cases, no way of rectifying it. A building has been demolished — it cannot be put up again. A highrise has been built at a certain corner — even if council could order it torn down, that would not restore the land to its original state.

Curtis points out that many important government decisions at the provincial and federal level are made by simple majority. He is quite correct in that, but most of those decisions, while important, are not irrevocable.

In this particular respect, land-use bylaws almost resemble more closely decisions of juries than they do ordinary government policies. And, as in the case of juries, it seems necessary to have as much protection as can reasonably be possible against mistakes. A two-thirds majority requirement is one protection that can be given to ensure, at least, that council is quite sure of the correctness of its position before it commits itself to irrevocable courses of action.

Curtis himself is not yet committed to an irrevocable course with this bill. He should take advantage of that to remove the two clauses mentioned here — the one dealing with regional boards until the inquiry report is in, the one dealing with land-use bylaws forever.

Godspeed to the Owens

Yesterday B.C. bid a fond farewell to one of its well-loved sons as Walter Owen, lieutenant-governor for the past five years, stepped down into a much-earned retirement.

Although in the last years Owen's health has been shaky, his enthusiasm for the job has never waned. He has brought to the position a sense of dignity and courage that could well be emulated by every citizen of the province.

He and his wife Shirley have developed a friendly, informal atmosphere in Government House, a feeling that the Rockland Avenue mansion really is a place for every British Columbian, be he dignitary or schoolchild. The sincere pleasure the Owens take in meeting B.C. citizens has been evident in everything they do.

Moreover, the lieutenant-governorship has been only the last jewel in a a long string of achievements for Owen. His work in law, in business, in community organizations, and as a soldier during the Second World War are all part of a record of devotion and service.

Today Brigadier Henry Bell-Irving begins his first full day in office as lieutenant-governor. Good luck to him as he moves to fill the shoes Owen left behind; it won't be an easy job.

Marijuana Smokers

I did not experience the McCarthy Days but feel I am about to witness a similar witch hunt. Of course, I am referring to Dr. McGeer's decision to allow the firing of teachers that smoke marijuana. I do not want to discuss the legal or the moral issues of smoking marijuana but instead take Dr. McGeer's action forward following his logic.

So, once we have fired all the marijuana smoking teachers should we fire all the professors at the universities that teach our teachers? Why should we allow persons that smoke marijuana to take an education degree since they would not be allowed to teach? That's great: we have fired all the teachers that smoke marijuana, and do not even allow students to enter the education faculty — if they smoke marijuana.

But what about the librarians that order the books that our children read? They certainly should be fired if they smoke marijuana. How about the school bus drivers? And we can't forget the janitors who smoke marijuana.

Suppose that Dr. McGeer cleaned out the education system of all marijuana smokers. Then does he call for the other departments of the government to fire all their staff that smoke marijuana? After all, we can not have advisors, clerks, secretaries, etc. that handle the province's affairs smoking marijuana.

After Dr. McGeer has had all the government's employees fired that smoke marijuana his next step would be not to grant any contracts to companies that employ persons that smoke marijuana. Obviously, they can't be trusted to construct our highways, bridges, and buildings.

By this time, thousands of people would be unemployed with no hope of continuing their careers because they smoke marijuana. Of course, all these people will have to be looked after by society but the working man is not going to enjoy paying taxes to feed and house unemployed teachers, professors, librarians, bus drivers, etc. that smoke marijuana. The next logical step would be to create ghettos for them until they can be dealt with . . .

The scary thing about this witch hunt is that it is being allowed to be conducted by McGeer who is an "elected official". I just hope the federal government doesn't decriminalize marijuana before Dr. McGeer has a chance to fire the teachers that smoke marijuana and to escalate his witch hunt.

I am not a teacher and am in no way connected with any of the jobs mentioned above. — James S. Burns, 9683 Ardmore Drive, Sidney.

More Phone Phraud

I am writing in regard to your article entitled Phone Fraud (Times, May 1). Admittedly, I am an idealist but I would like to ask the question, anyway. What ever happened to the principle of integrity? Any person with any intelligence at all can think of ways to swindle companies such as B.C. Tel, for instance, out of a few dollars. I don't think printing an article telling people ways that B.C. Tel is being duped will make the average person want to try it. I feel making people aware of these problems is in fact a positive thing.

The average person is not a criminal type. I feel that the average person is like myself, brought up to believe that we should strive for a better society, one where honesty is admired and morals are something to be proud of. I am teaching these principles to my children and I have my parents to thank for the fact that I do not spend all my time trying to think of ways to cheat people but use it much more constructively than that. — Cathy Fulton, 3371 Linwood Avenue.

Minnie Mountain

I am writing concerning the proposed subdivision of land above Ten Mile Point, commonly known as Minnie Mountain.

The developer (Broadmead Farms) has applied to Saanich to put apartments and townhouses in an area which has been traditionally single family. Let's keep it that way!

The land use contract was originally drawn up for the betterment of the environment and to protect the public interest. These two things have to be taken into consideration in the drawing up of the contract by the municipality.

Saanich council is not taking notice of what the individual taxpayer wants if it allows the blight of multiple blocks of apartments to fulminate in this area. In fact it is a blatant misuse of a land use contract.

One good example of wise use of a land use contract is the improvement to the foreshore line of Victoria harbor. Where not so long ago it was a real eyesore, the improvement is nothing short of dramatic, including excellent provision of public access to the water.

Please consider the long range benefits to the taxpayer and to future generations, and do not allow apartments and townhouses in our area. — Margaret A. Vey, 3886 Cadboro Bay Road.

Lottery Money

More and more people are asking and wondering exactly how the proceeds or profits of our government-run lotteries are being distributed.

Should there not be some accountability to the public who pour these millions of dollars into their chances of becoming richer? Any club or organization wishing to run a Bingo or lottery to raise funds must first obtain a licence from the government lottery branch, fill in an application in triplicate and obtain police permission before starting. After the event it is required to prepare and send in to the lottery section a complete statement of the profits, expenses, etc.

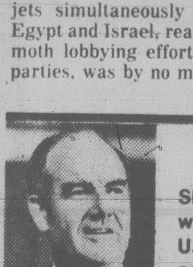
Why not then a government statement, showing people how all this money is handled? It could be done quarterly or half-yearly, showing total income from sales, expenses including salaries, also the amounts paid out to the organizations and the names of such. While we understand that sports and culture benefit mostly, I would suggest, and many more agree, that a goodly portion should and could be allocated to our hospitals, where this is urgently needed.

Let our governments consider this seriously, and put the people's money into this useful suggestion where it will benefit whoever is unfortunately taken sick and requires medical attention. — Griff Owens, 31—880 Vernon Avenue.

CLAUDE ADAMS

The End of Ethnic Politics in Washington

WASHINGTON — Last week's senate vote on the Mid-East warplane package is being viewed here as much more than just another U.S. arms deal. For better or worse, it stands as a clear message to American Jews that "ethnic politics" may have had its run in Washington. The decision to sell military jets simultaneously to Saudi Arabia, Egypt and Israel, reached after a mammoth lobbying effort by all interested parties, was by no means the first tangible sign that things are changing. Yet it was probably the most dramatic.



SEN. McGOVERN: warns that U.S. backlash could erupt against Israel.

Kicked off by President Carter's endorsement of the "legitimate" rights of the Palestinians, and propelled by Anwar Sadat's much-vaunted peace initiative, this change in the U.S. political and diplomatic landscape is getting the most mixed reviews.

"A lot of people are stunned by what's been happening," said a congressional Mid-East specialist recently, "not only pleased or hopping mad, but stunned. They sense that some basic changes are taking place, not just in what we are doing but in how we are doing it, and they aren't sure how to react."

In another time, it would have been unthinkable, for example, for a U.S. senator to speak so bluntly about the Jewish lobby as Sen. Mike Gravel of Alaska did just before the warplane vote.

Referring to the many ultimatums that the legislators had been given in the weeks leading up to the vote, Gravel said: "I think this will be the watershed year of Jewish influence in this country.

"When you deliver an ultimatum once you cannot deliver it twice or three times. When you are told 'this is it,' then you have to live with that situation."

Equally remarkable was the candor with which Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, traditionally a firm supporter of Israel, defended his decision to vote for Carter's warplane package. Inviting the wrath of Washington's most powerful lobby, Ribicoff said that western dependence on Saudi oil could not be ignored, and Arab moderates needed U.S. support.

At a secret session, he reportedly also warned his colleagues against letting "ethnic politics" shape U.S. foreign policy.

Another high profile senator, George McGovern, advised Israel's most outspoken backers in Washington not to press their case too hard, lest they set in motion a backlash both in the Middle East and in the United States that can only harm the Israeli cause.

It can be safely argued that the Carter administration and Congress are in tune with the public mood over the Mid-East question. An April poll by CBS News and the New York Times showed that there was substantially more support for Sadat's handling of Arab-Israeli relations than for Menachem Begin's. Barbara Walters and Walter Cronkite with their TV diplomacy probably had as much to do with this perception as anything else.

Saudi Arabia, meanwhile, is taking pains to present itself as moderate. It vetoed a mid-year hike in oil prices, and insisted it would not abandon the dollar as the official currency for oil transactions.

And despite the best efforts of the Jewish lobby to demonstrate otherwise, Israel is no longer seen as the underdog in the conflict. The 1976 raid on Entebbe and the recent invasion of South Lebanon were two important factors in this change of view.

As a state department official put it in blunt terms: "They just can't have it both ways. Either they're underdogs or bullies. Take your pick."

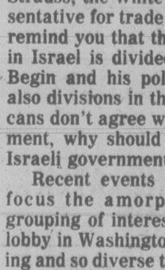
Occasionally during the past 16 months, this not-so-subtle shift in the thinking of the American public and their leaders has spilled over into nastiness. Last spring, for example, national security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski took the impolitic course of charging Jewish leaders with "intimidation" and portraying their attitude as: "If you don't agree with us, we're going to stamp you an anti-Semite."

At about the same time, a White House aide in charge of liaison with the Jewish community, Mark Siegel, resigned in a much-publicized dispute over policy.

These are nervous times for American Jews who recall a kinder political climate in Washington under previous administrations, but then, the nature of the Mid-East conflict has changed drastically. There is some sharp disagreement among Jews about how Begin is pursuing peace.

"The Jewish community in this country is not monolithic; there is no one point of view out there," says Robert Strauss, the White House special representative for trade negotiations. I would remind you that the Jewish community in Israel is divided on Prime Minister Begin and his policies, and there are also divisions in this country. If Americans don't agree with their own government, why should they agree with the Israeli government?"

Recent events have put into sharp focus the amorphous yet powerful grouping of interests called the Jewish lobby in Washington. It is so wide-ranging and so diverse that it almost escapes definition. Many don't even believe it exists, other than as a state of mind.



MENACHEM BEGIN: his people are no longer seen as the Mid-East underdogs.

"Jewish lobby? There is no such thing," an executive assistant to Sen. Jacob Javits of New York told a reporter for the National Journal, a Washington weekly that did a recent cover story on the lobby.

"Hell! It's not a Jewish lobby. It's an American lobby," said a lobbyist for the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith.

"It's an inappropriate term that almost smacks of anti-Semitism," said Sen. Howard Metzenbaum of Ohio. "I don't think it's a lobby. Why not call it a 'people-oriented American Jewish community political concern' or something like that?"

Yet other people on Capitol Hill less prone to semanticism marvel at the clout that the grouping has when it comes time to lean on congressmen. The best description comes from a staffer who worked with a coalition of fellow Jews to attack the oil companies after the 1973 Arab oil embargo:

"It's a hand. There are many fingers wiggling around. Then comes the challenge — and we close to form a fist."

Much of the punch in this fist, as outlined in the National Journal article, is provided by the American Israel Public Affairs Committee (AIPAC), headed by the scrappy Morris Amitay. With an annual budget of $750,000 and a membership of 11,000, AIPAC has never been accused of subtlety.

Not so long ago, it mailed to all members of Congress copies of the book Holocaust, based on the television series. Its detailed newspaper advertisements lambasting the sale of warplanes to Saudi Arabia made up in vigor what they lacked in subtlety.

AIPAC has access to large numbers of sympathetic newspaper editors and broadcasters across the country and, thus, congressmen are guaranteed almost immediate feedback about any comments they make about the Mid-East, whether perceived as good or bad by AIPAC.

"They can reward a senator for his support in a big hurry," said one political activist on the hill.

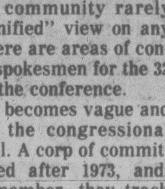
When Sen. Ribicoff recently went on record in the Wall Street Journal as saying that Americans were overwhelmingly against the spread of Israeli settlements in occupied territories, and also criticized some members of the Jewish lobby, he quickly felt the heat.

AIPAC sent a memo to its members in Connecticut, Ribicoff's home state, charging that the senator had attended a luncheon for the PLO United Nations representative. The senator also received 28 critical telegrams, all charged to the same telephone number, criticizing his stand on the warplane deal.

While AIPAC pounds the Capitol Hill beat, an umbrella group called the Conference of Presidents of Major Jewish Organizations works the White House and the state department. Its current president, Rabbi Alexander Schindler, made headlines not so long ago when he described President Carter as a "question mark" for many American Jews.

Schindler freely admits that the American Jewish community rarely puts forward a "unified" view on any subject. Rather, there are areas of consensus reached by spokesmen for the 32 member groups of the conference.

Where the lobby becomes vague and elusive is among the congressional aides on Capitol Hill. A corp of committed staffers evolved after 1973, and, according to one member, they track the same issues, call on another from time to time, and meet socially. Their impact on policy and legislation can only be guessed at, but it is believed to be substantial.



ANWAR SADAT: his initiatives towards peace have won him high esteem.

However, in the final analysis, observers say, it is the Jewish American constituency of six million which gives the "lobby" its real strength.

"My Jewish constituents are very upset with this plane deal," said one Jewish congressman from New York recently. "There are 500 from the district who are coming down here. They say they want to come down to demonstrate their feelings.

"I told them there's nothing they can do down here except see the cherry blossoms; they ought to be back home writing letters. But they're coming anyway. I guess they've got to get it out of their systems."

Whether they can learn to accept the new U.S. Mid-East policy promises to be one of the more fascinating questions of Jimmy Carter's remaining term as president.

Terrorists: The People Who Gave Up

By FLORA LEWIS

ROME — Some assert that there are operational links among the extremist groups that have been afflicting Europe. No significant ties have been proved. There are differences in methods, slogans, circumstances.

But two things the groups do have in common: a vehement rejection not only of the societies in which they live but of the established, traditional political oppositions, including nominally revolutionary parties, which they denounce as reformist or impotent.

Italy's Red Brigades have been the most spectacular and, by the measure of warm blood spilled, the most successful in provoking unsettling questions about the capacity of democracies to cope with such hatred. There are violent extremists on the right as well, in Italy, in Spain, perhaps among some of the nationalists such as the Irish, the Bretons, the Corsicans.

It isn't always easy to distinguish the paths they followed to their views. Renato Curcio, the jailed Red Brigades' leader, spoke on behalf of an extreme right group in 1964, long before his ideas for "proletarian" armed struggle evolved.

Marxist

But the dominant rhetoric of the terrorists, and of sympathizers prepared to admire if not to support them, and to support them if not to join them, is Marxist. They speak of "the workers" and "the masses," of the poetic society of equals where all is serenity and justice, of destroying what is, on the premise that ashes must produce a phoenix. Of necessity, they are tightly elitist and coldly intellectual, reacting almost always to abstractions rather than to personal, human experience.

It cannot be an accident that most of the extremists come from the middle-class, whether they have gone on to violence as have some in Italy, fewer in Germany and scarcely any in France, or they simply push at politics from the fringes. In those three countries, as in others, they have sought to involve themselves with ordinary workers but have made their impact mostly among students and the philosophically rather than the economically discontent.

Bank robber

But it would probably be a Marxist fallacy to pay too close attention to the backgrounds of the few dozen who have emerged in public view. There are many complex reasons for human behavior, not the least, haphazard circumstance. Thus one of the 13 prisoners whose release the Red Brigades demanded in exchange for the kidnapped former Prime Minister, Aldo Moro, was an ordinary bank robber and murderer whose political conversion took place in jail and whose inclusion may have been primarily a gesture to promote further such recruitment.

Some of the Italian terrorists come from families with a Communist tradition. One, Paulino Maurizio Ferrari, an orphan from Modena, planned to be a priest. Domenico delli Verneri, from a comfortable Naples family, studied to be an engineer. The West Germans — though not Andreas Baader, who was something of a roustabout — seem to have had more definitely bourgeois backgrounds. In France, extremism is largely a monopoly of the universitarian, often brought up to be the "fils a papa," a well-heeled daddy's darling.

Wherever they came from, they all seem to have reached their stage of desperate and aggressive disillusion in the aftermath of the upheavals of 1968. Some went on to join the world as it is, changing their habits and ambitions from those of their parents as each generation tends to do this century, but accepting that as change enough. Some joined opposition parties — Communists and left-wing Socialists — Trotskyist, feminist, gay liberation, ecologist, antinuclear.

The terrorists are the people who gave up. They talk of "action" but they mean the use of brute power to provoke a degree of repression that would make the society which they now find intolerable literally beyond the tolerance of most everyone else. Many of the groups, including those who do not practise violence but tend to condone it, speak vaguely of Maoism and still think in terms of China's Cultural Revolution, though Peking has put that firmly behind. But their thesis isn't really Mao's "fish in the sea" of the revolutionary at home in the accommodating element of the still passive masses. It is rather Che Guevara's harsher thesis that authority must be frightened into making people suffer more acutely so they will be aroused to follow the lead of embittered violence.

'Sold out'

It does not seem to matter to them that the Cuban revolutionary failed in his testing ground of Bolivia, and not because he was killed with the help of the Central Intelligence Agency but because the peasants he chose to lead did not see virtue in worsening their lot. It does matter to them that they have grown impatient, disgusted with what they see as their societies' resistance to their special vision.

The particular ferocity and spread of the phenomenon in Italy has not only to do with Italy's greater economic and social difficulties. It also has much to do with the power and policy of the Italian Communist Party. Most Italian extremists simply reject the Communists as having "sold out." On occasion, however, Red Brigade missives have spoken of dedication to communism and said that their group's purpose is to force a return to original Leninist revolutionary aims, as well as methods, on the fattened party.

Indeed, in its search for respectability, its desire to show a sense of realism in reviving the economy, its concern to conserve the power base it has achieved and participate in government power, the Italian Communist party has neglected layers of people left outside the realm of acquired benefits.

Those who don't belong to a union, who haven't gotten a job through the party, students who see no prospect of admission to the responsible world, form a new subproletariat. Many are turning to the "extreme-parliamentary" groups, not all of them violent, who have outflanked the Italian Communists on the left.

The party is worried and divided about what to do. It recognizes the risks. But its leadership feels compelled to denounce the violent and try to "recuperate the healthy elements" on the far left, as party officials put it.

The French Communists, not faced with the problem to the same degree — at least in part because they have not moved far from orthodoxy — are nonetheless also concerned about the danger of leaving a "vacuum on the left." It is a principal argument of hardliners against the vocal French Communist faction demanding more liberalization, more appeal to moderates. The West German Communist Party is so small that it is rightly dismissed as ineffective by the former leftists, who also turn their backs without explanation or apology against the authoritarian East.

Quiet aid

Whether or not the extremists get secret practical aid from the East bloc and Mocow — and there is no evidence that they do — they get no public or propaganda support. Soviet help for liberation movements and revolutionaries does not extend to people who dispute the very idea of state power and proclaim their ideology as purer than Moscow's. The essentially nationalist extremists such as the Irish and the Basques, whose challenge is far more limited, stand a better chance of quiet aid from that quarter.

The cycle, and the phenomenon, of absolute rejection are not new. Some people dream of glory and salvation in a gentle halo. Some turn their dreams to bloody nightmares. When it happens, though, it is a sign that something is sorely missing from everyday life. The rise of extremism represents a gap, a loss of hope, not necessarily a sign of coming revolution but a decay, whatever the reason offered, whatever the specific human experience.

More Money to Jog Memoirs?

OTTAWA—Former federal NDP leader David Lewis has recently been given his fourth Canada Council grant in as many years to write his memoirs, and now appears to be searching for a ghost writer.

Lewis, who has already missed two deadlines with his publishers, has now had to inform them that the first volume won't be ready for the fall book season as hoped.

Worse news, though, is that his first choice for a ghost writer, the PhD student who has been doing research for him at the Public Archives of Canada, has turned him down. He has ambitions of writing a book of his own on Lewis' career and may even scoop his mentor with the effort.

The politician who campaigned in two elections against corporate welfare bums, living off government handouts, put the touch on the federal grant agency late last year for a (final) $40,405 grant, to go along with the $83,594 he has been awarded in three separate grants since he retired in 1974.

The money, now totalling $123,899, was granted to go toward the research for an expected two-volume memoir covering a history of the social democratic movement in Canada from the perspective of his career in the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation and the New Democratic Party.

The total falls slightly short of the $172,979 that the council gave former prime minister John Diefenbaker toward the research and writing of his three-volume memoirs.

However, the generous amount has even some New Democrats worried. They view with alarm the time Lewis is taking, and the fact that his repeated trips to the Canada Council may have cleaned out the pot — at a time when other party notables such as Stanley Knowles and former leader T. C. Douglas are expected to retire and write their life stories as well.

Lewis has been a professor at Carleton University's Institute of Canadian Studies since 1975.

Lawyers 'Pompously Protective'

THE GLOBE AND MAIL
An Editorial

In the ranks of Canada's law societies there lurks a traditional element to whom advertising is a vulgarity best left to car dealers, soap salesmen, and the distributors of Twenty Electrifying Hits. This is the same element that has brought down on the head of the profession such choice epithets as privileged, monopolistic, restrictive, elitist, and secretive.

An unfortunate image, but one which could be readily dispelled by removal of the mystique placed between lawyers and the public. One helpful move in this direction would be to allow lawyers to convey basic, vital information to the public about the services they have to offer and — let's not shrink from the vile subject of money — how much they are likely to cost.

Call it advertising, if you will; or simply communication. It is certainly not going to demean the profession to make things a little easier for the people who want to avail themselves of the services. It may, in fact, be illegal for the law societies to prohibit their members from doing so; federal Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Warran Allmand has suggested that this might run contrary to the terms of the Combines Investigation Act, if it unduly limited competition.

There are reputable lawyers willing to handle uncontested divorce cases for fees that ran at about one-fifth that of some established law firms — a difference in cost which, though perhaps crucial to a member of the public, will remain academic if he doesn't know about it.

Mr. Allmand's contention is that the denial of freedom to attract business by advertising prices lowers the incentive to cut fees, develop cost-saving techniques or increase efficiency. He has the general support of his Ontario counterpart, Larry Grossman, who said: "I believe that the legal profession should stimulate, encourage and de-mystify public awareness of legal services through advertising."

There is an intriguing irony in the thought that the lawyers' present position may rest on an illegality, but we would not like to see the matter resolved in that way. Even if it were found that the ban on advertising did not conflict with the Combines Investigation act, common sense would still argue that it should be dropped as an outdated, unrealistic, unfair vestige of one of the profession's more pompously protective traditions.

Ennui Under the Elms

russell baker

"Ladies and gentlemen, we interrupt this program to take you to Washington where something may have happened. Standing by in our Washington Studio is Winston Jakes. Can you tell us, Winston, whether something really has happened in Washington and, if so, what?"

"As you may have heard, Chuck, the rumor that something had happened began spreading through Georgetown during the cocktail hour this evening and reached the White House shortly before 7 o'clock. What precisely may have happened is still uncertain. But for a more detailed report, our White House correspondent, Harry Kripp, is on the White House lawn beautifully posed under the lovely old White House elms. What can you tell us, Harry?"

"Right, Winston. This is Harry Kripp reporting from under the Lovely old White House elms. Jody Powell has just told me that if anything has happened in Washington the White House is unaware of it, although the president has asked for an immediate report."

"Harry Kripp, this is Chuck Pompadour at New York News Central. We've had these rumors before that something has happened in Washington, haven't we?"

"Indeed we have Chuck. Five of them in the past eight months. All turned out to be false. The government cannot assume, of course, that this is just another empty rumor."

"And it's gratifying to know, Harry, that the government is using all its resources to track down the source of this report. For a report on that search, we go to Grit Harte at FBI headquarters. What is happening, Grit, as the FBI now attempts to find out whether something really has happened in Washington?"

"Chuck, agents have already fanned out through all the principal centres of government and their reports are being fed into this central computer, which processes them and transmits them directly to a federal analysis centre in Kansas City, which is specially designed to detect the slightest evidence that anything has happened in Washington.

"So if something really has happened in Washington, Grit, the federal analysis centre will report it instantly."

"That's right, Chuck. Instantly. So far, it has detected nothing except that the FBI has fanned out through the principal centres of government. Normally, as you know, the FBI is concentrated picketing courthouses, and so the fanning out in itself is in the nature of a happening."

"Right, Grit Harte, but hardly a happening of the first magnitude. We are getting reports from the Pentagon that its warning system has picked up signs that there may be life in Congress. To check that out, let's go back to Winston Jakes in our Washington studio."

"This is Winston Jakes in the Washington studio, Chuck. For more on this startling report, Harry Kripp is standing by under the White House elms, waiting to call in our congressional correspondent, Drone Bloor."

"Thank you, Winston. This is Harry Kripp under the White House elms, switching you now to Capitol Hill and Drone Bloor."

★ ★ ★

"Thank you, Harry. Thank you, Winston. Thank you, Chuck. This is Drone Bloor on Capitol Hill. Assistant Capitol Correspondent Caroline Custerd has just arrived at the House of Representatives to check rumors that signs of life have been discovered on that side of the Capitol. Here is her report."

"Thank you, Drone. Thank you, Harry. Thank you, Winston. Thank you, Chuck. This is Caroline Custerd reporting from the House of Representatives, where sources tell me absolutely nothing has happened, including the discovery of life in Congress. Back to you, Drone."

"Thanks, Caroline. Back to you, Harry."

"Thanks, Harry. Back to you, Chuck."

"This is Chuck Pompadour at New Central. At my side is Erwin Ergot, former Washington insider who was hired by this network after we were outbid for Henry Kissinger and the Gerald Ford family. Erwin, is there a contingency plan that goes into effect automatically in case something happens in Washington?"

★ ★ ★

"There certainly is, Chuck. The details are top secret, or course, but it concludes with the president being notified that something has happened in Washington."

"Fortunately, Erwin, that procedure rarely has to go into effect down there."

"Not these days, Chuck, although early-warning radar has recently picked up signals suggesting that something may happen before 1980, and if so . . ."

"Excuse me, Erwin, but I have just received a report that the FBI confirms that something has indeed happened in Washington and that the president has been notified."

"This is a rare moment, Chuck. Do we know yet what it is that's happened?"

"Yes, Erwin. Winston Jakes has changed his hair stylist. The White House has no comment. This is Chuck Pompadour. We return you now to 'Squad Car Fiddler.'"

MDs Tackle Pot, 2,4-D And Uranium

VERNON (CP) — Members of the British Columbia Medical Association had a busy first day at their annual convention here Thursday, tackling resolutions on the herbicide 2,4-D, marijuana and uranium mining.

The 200 delegates voted to oppose the provincial government's plan to use 2,4-D to fight Eurasian milfoil in the Okanagan Lake system.

Dr. Robert Woollard, chairman of the association's environmental health committee, said the herbicide presents a potential health hazard with which he would not like to be in contact on a regular basis.

The association is also supporting a recommendation that marijuana and its derivatives be removed from the Narcotic Control Act.

Dr. K. T. Barnum, chairman of the association's drug and alcohol committee, said the committee is not supporting the legalization of marijuana. It feels, however, that penalties should be more in keeping with the dangers presented by marijuana, he said.

He said that since marijuana is not a narcotic, it is illogical and unreasonable to have it under the Narcotic Control Act.

He said placing marijuana under separate legislation covering cannabis and its natural or synthetic derivatives would remove the stigma of a narcotics conviction for those arrested for possessing or using it.

23rd Lt.-Gov. Sworn In

Brig. Henry Pybus Bell-Irving was sworn in as B.C.'s 23rd lieutenant-governor in a ceremony at Government House Thursday.

Bell-Irving, a Vancouver realtor, takes over as the Queen's representative to this province from Walter Owen whose five-year appointment ended with the investiture of Bell-Irving.

Premier Bennett and most of his cabinet were among the guests which also included former lieutenant-governors Owen, John Nicholson, Gen. George Pearkes, Clarence Wallace and the wife of the late Frank Ross.

Justice Minister Ron Basford was the federal representative at the ceremony. Appointments are made by the prime minister.

Bell-Irving and his wife, Nancy, will be the new tenants at the Government House mansion on Rockland Avenue for the next five years — the usual term of office.

Bell-Irving's military background was evident by both his ramrod-stiff demeanor during the swearing-in ceremony and by his first official proclamation as the new lieutenant-governor.

"I think the bar is open," Bell-Irving said to his guests just as the official speeches had finished. The time was one minute past noon.

"He's smack on time," Attorney-General Garde Gardom observed. "The sun's over the yardarm. He's a true military man."

Bell-Irving said he was looking forward to the coming years and paid tribute to the departing Owen and his wife, Shirley.

Owen for his part good-naturedly chided reporters, asking them if they'd come to observe the fading away of the old, or the beginning of the new.

Bell-Irving said he was glad Owen was there to help him with his first duties and he praised the strength and dignity he showed in his term of office.

He thanked the Owens on behalf of all British Columbians for their service to the province.

Bennett said he was looking forward to as close a working relationship with Bell-Irving as he'd had with Owen.

Basford congratulated Bell-Irving on behalf of the prime minister and the privy council and told the guests that Owen had set an example for all Canadians in these times of adversity.

ACCIDENT PROBE SECRECY FEARED

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Toronto coroner said Thursday the federal government's proposed Transport Accident Investigation Commission would seriously impair the function of every coroners' court in Canada because of its unprecedented powers of subpoena and secrecy.

Dr. Elie Cass, a coroner for 21 years, said in a telephone interview that proposals outlined in Transport Canada's discussion paper on the commission will be an "an absolute disaster if enacted in its present form.

"It's the worst example of government secrecy I've ever seen," said Cass, noting that Transport Minister Otto Lang has promised fast action on the commission in the wake of the Feb. 11 jet crash at Cranbrook, B.C., that killed 43 persons.

The 15-page document proposes that the commission be empowered to conduct investigations and hearings into every type of transportation accident under federal jurisdiction involving loss of life, including plane crashes, train wrecks, other types of land disasters, marine accidents, pipeline and oil rig accidents.

The commission would have an annual budget of about $1.5 million.

Drunk Film Wasn't Allowed

KAMLOOPS (CP) — RCMP Insp. Vic Edwards said his detachment prepared video tape evidence for a drunk driving trial two years ago but it was not allowed in court.

Edwards was commenting on a claim by Vernon RCMP that an upcoming trial there will be the first in Canada in which video evidence of a driver's performance after his arrest will be used.

"The same thing was tried here in Kamloops two years ago but it wasn't successful in court," he said.

The accused must plead guilty in order for video evidence to be allowed, said Edwards, and the accused must also have been advised of the filming and agreed to it.

"No drunk would agree to this and then plead guilty," he said.

Edwards said that in the case here two years ago, the accused pleaded not guilty so the video evidence was abandoned.

Edwards said the concept of video evidence is a good one.

"It gives a very true picture of a person's action, but it's like a wiretap. You have to protect the rights of people, you have to follow the rules."

Vernon RCMP, copying a system used in Snohomish County in Washington state, have marked black lines in the corridor leading to the breath test room at the RCMP building. Drivers perform four basic balance tests in front of the cameras.

Hospital Breath Test?

KAMLOOPS (CP) - Coroner John Wrinch says the installation of a breath-test unit at Royal Inland Hospital would prevent drunk drivers from eluding charges by sobering up while waiting for medical treatment.

It would be a simpler solution, he said, than a plan being studied by the government to replace breath tests with blood tests.

"We want a portable breathalyser machine in the hospital," said Wrinch. "Too many people are getting away with being drunk."

No Phone Rate Hike

MONTREAL (CP) - Gordon MacFarlane, chairman of British Columbia Telephone Co. said Thursday there will be no increase in telephone rates in the province this year. Speaking to a group of institutional investors, MacFarlane said the company is opposed to a Canadian National-Canadian Pacific Telecommunications (CNCP) application to the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission to connect its transmission system to those of Bell Canada and other telephone companies.

Riding Changes

ROSSLAND (CP) — Chris D'Arcy (NDP—Rossland-Trail) told the electoral reform commission Thursday that British Columbia should adopt a system of single-member ridings of almost equal population. His brief to the commission said the province should be divided into 55 single-member ridings and there should be no more than a 10-per-cent variation in their populations.

Support Pledged

MATSQUI (CP) — Delegates to the annual convention of British Columbia Federation of Peace Officers voted unanimously Thursday to support any candidate in the next federal election who supports the restoration of the death penalty.

U.S. Interested

VANCOUVER (CP) — The United States government has given local educators a $175,000 grant to study the first few years of public funding of British Columbia's independent schools. The Educational Research Institute of B.C. is sponsoring the project, which will employ a team of B.C. professors and researchers.

MDs Accept Fees

VERNON (CP) — British Columbia doctors have voted 80 per cent to accept a 7.2-per-cent increase in fees received from the provincial Medical Services Commission.

Parkland Urged

VANCOUVER (CP) — Environment Minister Jim Nielsen has proposed that all but 100 acres of the 1,263-acre University Endowment Lands (UEL) be preserved as parkland, but the head of a study commissioned by Nielsen on UEL use said Thursday all the land should be preserved as park. Byron Olson, whose study recommended last fall that all the land be kept as park, said "we're the only city in North America to still have a large tract of wild, wooded land at our doorstep and we should preserve it by any means possible."

Miners Settle

GRANISLE (CP) — Workers at the Granby Mining Corp. copper mine about 350 kilometres north of Vancouver Wednesday voted 71 per cent of a new one-year contract. The 257 workers will receive a wage increase of 5.3 per cent and a further one per cent increase in fringe benefits.

Pickets Object To Whale Talk

SEATTLE (AP) — About two dozen Greenpeace demonstrators marched in Seattle Wednesday as a special scientific subcommittee of the International Whaling Commission began a week-long meeting.

The demonstration took place at an entrance to the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration headquarters at Sand Point, where the conference is being held.

Dr. Paul Spong of Vancouver, scientific adviser to Greenpeace, said one of the things being protested was that the session represents a closed forum completely isolated from public opinion.

"The committee has a long history of secrecy and poor judgment and greed," Spong said.

"The meeting is not secret," said Dr. Ray Gambell, International Whaling Commission secretary. "We just don't let the public or the media attend."

Asked about the Greenpeace demonstration, Gambell said "it's perfectly reasonable to expect some people to want no killing of whales. Some people don't eat pigs, some don't eat cows.

"But if you do eat pigs and cows, you have to figure out how to farm them. That's what we're trying to do."

NDP Tackles Policy

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

The more than 900 delegates to the NDP annual convention which starts tonight at the University of Victoria will be asked to consider adopting policies ranging from ending holiday weekend conventions to keeping B.C.'s nose out of Quebec affairs.

Delegates from around the province will converge on the UVic campus for the four-day convention.

They will consider 202 resolutions brought forward from the constituency level to be debated and perhaps adopted by the provincial party.

Leader Dave Barrett will address the convention about 8.30 p.m. tonight.

National leader Ed Broadbent will be the keynote speaker at 2.30 p.m. Sunday.

A number of the resolutions call for a re-affirmation of the NDP policy to nationalize B.C. Tel at the first opportunity.

One suggests B.C. Tel reduce its rates during strikes because its service deteriorates during those times.

A number of different constituencies want the provincial party to be on record as defending the rights of the Quebec people to choose their own future, and once constituency goes as far as to say the federal government has no right to use force of any kind to impose a decision on the people of Quebec.

Several resolutions in areas as diverse as education and human resources call for de-centralization of government administration.

One suggests individual school boards be responsible for the development of curriculum at each school so cultural and social requirements can best be met.

Several constituencies want the NDP to bring back community resources boards when the party is returned to power to de-centralize the human resources ministry.

The Victoria constituency calls for a greater de-centralization of all government bureaucracy and suggests greater local citizen control be a cornerstone of the next NDP election platform.

The energy policy sub-committee is calling for a resumption of the Thompson oil ports inquiry and wants the inquiry to hold hearings throughout the province.

It suggests funds be made available to groups opposing the pipeline.

Labor supporters in the party want a policy passed that would remind NDP MLAs that labor is an equal partner and an integral part of the party.

They propose any MLA who disassociates himself from labor be reprimanded and face the prospect of losing party support for re-nomination.

Freedom of information legislation, an end to the jailing of juveniles, an eventual end of sales tax and a reduction of school taxes are all included in the resolutions to be debated.

CDC PROFIT OFF

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Canada Development Corp. (CDC) reported Thursday net income of $1.6 million for the quarter ending March 31, compared with $8 million for the corresponding period in 1977.

Revenue was $304 million, a 77-per-cent increase from the first quarter of 1977, CDC said in a news release.

CDC reported a loss of nine cents a share compared with net earnings of 13 cents a share in the same period in 1977.

H.A. Hampson, CDC president, said expected first quarter start-up losses at the new Petrosar plant in Sarnia, Ont., of which CDC's share was $7.1 million, were responsible for the decreased earnings. The plant successfully started operations and its drain on CDC's earnings will diminish sharply over the remainder of the year, he said.

Handgun Ban For Tourists

WHITEHORSE, Yukon (AP) — Canada Customs says that as of June 15 non-residents travelling in transit through Canada will no longer be able to carry handguns and other restricted weapons, sealed or unsealed.

In the past, persons travelling through Canada en route to or from Alaska could carry weapons if they were sealed by Canadian customs agents at a Canadian port of entry and remained sealed in Canada.

W.J. Wilson, Canada Customs area director here, said Thursday that movement of such weapons through Canada will be prohibited completely beginning June 15.

The ban affects handguns, automatic firing weapons and weapons which can be folded or telescoped to a length of less than 26 inches. The ban does not apply to sporting rifles or shotguns of 26 inches or more in length.

"Any person arriving at any Canadian customs port of entry with a restricted weapon will be required to return it to the United States," Wilson said.

He said anyone failing to declare a restricted weapon on entering Canada faces seizure of the weapon, seizure of the vehicle in which it is being carried, and prosecution.

Le Car is here.
At last, an economy car that doesn't economize on fun.

Which is why in Europe, where driving is as much a passion as a means of transportation, there are more Le Cars on the road than Rabbits and Fiestas combined.

A lot of things contribute to Le Car's fun. Like a combination of standard features you won't find on Rabbit or Civic. Including front wheel drive, rack and pinion steering, torsion bar suspension and Michelin steel-belted radials. All of which aid performance. There's even an optional sun roof, so big we call it a Fun Roof.

Le Car doesn't economize on comfort either.

Le Car has an extra long wheelbase to provide an extra smooth ride.

And it comes with the most comfortable seats this side of your living room.

For an extra measure of comfort Le Car gives you more front and rear headroom than Rabbit and Civic. Even a wider hatch.

Yet Le Car slips into parking spaces they'd have to pass up.

In fact, the only thing Le Car economizes on is gas. Getting 57 mpg (92 km/g) on the highway,* and 40 mpg (64 km/g) in the city.*

Test drive one at your nearest Renault dealer soon. You'll realize for all its fun, Le Car is one small car you should seriously consider.

Le Fun Offer
We believe that if you drive Le Car, you'll like it. So we're offering a free "Le Car Freak" T-Shirt if you test drive Le Car before June 30, 1978.

The Tall Ships are coming!

Laurel Point offers Victoria's unique condominium townhome concept—built around the luxury living concept—and built to be the best. And less than half of the original number is still available.

CLOSURE DEBATE STUDIED

Speaker Harvey Schroeder reserved decision Thursday on a request by NDP leader Dave Barrett for a special debate on what he said was closure by the Social Credit majority on the legislature's public accounts committee.

Barrett said government members prevented the questioning of a public servant legally called before the committee to give information.

"This action completely destroyed the effectiveness of this committee," he said.

Barrett said that the Speaker ruled Wednesday that this was not a matter of privilege and therefore an immediate and full debate is essential.

Schroeder ruled Wednesday that the privileges of Liberal leader Gordon Gibson as an MLA had not been breached or impeded by the public accounts committee.

The provincial Human Rights Commission will be broadened this year to allow for wider geographic and social representation, Labor Minister Allan Williams said Thursday.

Williams said in the legislature, during debates of his budgetary estimates, that the now-defunct commission will be reconstituted and restructured as soon as possible.

"It is my view that the human rights commission should be broadened to include representation from the various segments and regions of our province to ensure development of programs in concert with input from a broad spectrum of our various communities," the minister said.

The commission's mandate expired Dec. 31, 1977, and since then Williams has been under pressure from various civil rights groups and opposition MLAs to resurrect it.

Total funding for human rights programs has been increased to $507,000 from $402,000, he said, adding this "is reflective of the increased activity foreseen for the human rights commission."

Williams also said he is looking into the possibility of setting up another board of review under the Workers' Compensation Board. He said there has been a considerable backlog of cases before the four boards or review.

He said it had been expected that there normally would be about 750 cases under review, but the number rose to 1,575 last October. Since then, it's been reduced to 1,300.

Williams said that while persons appealing WCB decisions in 1977 had to wait up to five months to have their appeals heard and decided on, new procedures have cut that time in half.

He stressed that the main function of his ministry is job training and employment opportunity programs. He said that 75 per cent — or $30 million — of his ministry's total budget is committed to this end.

HCBC Sale Help

An advisory committee has been appointed to assist in the planned sale of the Housing Corporation of B.C., Housing Minister Hugh Curtis said Thursday.

Curtis said in a news release that the five-man committee will be calling for purchase proposals starting June 1 and will review all offers received.

The minister said two corporation officials — chairman T. A. Toynbee and A. Spiro, immediate past chairman of the HCBC board's audit committee — will serve on the special committee but other officers have been excluded because some have expressed their intent to submit offers.

Curtis stressed he would have no part in the negotiations leading up to the sale of the corporation.

Lawyer Told Police Escaper Going Back

VANCOUVER (CP) — A woman lawyer charged with harboring a prison escaper told police she was preparing to having the man turn himself in when the prisoner was arrested, Judge J. C. Cowan heard Thursday.

RCMP Corp. Howard Johnston was testifying at the provincial court trial of city lawyer Patricia Colleen Connor, charged in connection with the escape of Russell Elliott last July 8.

She is also charged with possession of a 9 mm. Luger pistol not registered to her, and with possession of the gun as a stolen article.

Court was told Elliott escaped at knife-point from a Lower Mainland Regional Correctional centre guard in the washroom of the Vancouver General Hospital where the prisoner had been taken for treatment.

He was recaptured Sept. 9 when RCMP and city police staked out a house and shot him after he was twice warned to stop or be shot.

Police witnesses said that as they arrived to stake out the house they saw a car parked nearby with Miss Connor at the wheel. They entered the house and waited for the escaper to arrive, then confronted him outside where the shooting occurred.

Johnston testified that when Elliott fell a Luger pistol went to the ground from his possession and that seconds later the car driven by Miss Connor arrived at the scene as police were handcuffing the escaper and calling for an ambulance.

"I went over to the car, my service revolver in my hand," Johnston said. "I pointed it at her and told her to get out with her hands up, which she did."

"I was just going to turn him in," Johnston quoted the lawyer as telling him.

He said Miss Connor said that she had made a phone call to city police in this regard that day and that this could be verified by calling Detective George Barclay.

Detective Harry Gammie said that on that day, while he was in police headquarters, he did receive a call from an unidentified woman who asked for Detective Barclay and said he told her the detective was not in the office.

Hockey Blows Whistle On Unity Hearing Here

The Montreal Canadiens-Boston Bruins Stanley Cup game Thursday night was blamed for poor attendance at a public hearing of the B.C. Committee on Canadian Unity.

Hugh Stephen, a committee member and former Victoria mayor, told the 14 persons who attended the hearing the game apparently had kept Victorians glued to their television sets.

Ross Marks, B.C.-Yukon representative on the national Task Force on Canadian Unity, said "the size of the group really doesn't concern me that much."

One man asked how much the task force was spending. Marks replied that the budget was $3 million.

"I came tonight to see what I could find out, and frankly, I've learned nothing," the man said.

He then left.

Another man said he had lived in Quebec for several years and felt some people had preconceived ideas that Quebecers were unfriendly. The people of Quebec have strong hearts, he said, and are sensitive to that kind of reaction. He said he would like Quebec to remain part of the country.

A French-speaking man said he was concerned that Canada has become Americanized. He said French-language radio and television should be fully implemented in Western Canada.

One woman said that in some Canadian schools there are "Scottish teachers teaching Parisian French."

She said she dropped French in Grade 8 because it was not relevant to her experience in Canada.

Marks said the task force is committed to a Canadian federation with authority of state shared by two orders of government. He said the creation of the task force is a testimony to the stress which the federal system now is under "and all regions of Canada are reflecting and expressing this malaise."

The committee has visited Prince George, Cranbrook and Courtenay. Its next stop is Kamloops May 29.

Oil Spill Would Miss Here

Vancouver Island beaches likely would escape serious pollution from an oil spill in Juan de Fuca Strait, results of a study indicate.

Al Ages, hydraulic research engineer at the Institute of Ocean Sciences at Patricia Bay, said Thursday preliminary results of a year-long study show that currents in the strait would carry oil slicks toward the shores of Washington State.

Ages said he is preparing a report on his findings and will give it to the federal government this summer.

He said he conducted the study by stringing together hula hoops, floating them in the strait and monitoring their movement for two days.

None of the clusters of hoops, Ages said, moved towards B.C. shores.

Ages said his attempt to produce an accurate computer-based formula for predicting precise movements of oil slicks has been hampered by lack of adequate information on surface currents in the strait.

PM Plans UN Talk

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau will address the United Nations special session on disarmament May 26, his first speech to the UN in 10 years as prime minister, it was announced Thursday.

The prime minister's office also said Trudeau will attend a NATO summit meeting in Washington May 30-31.

Beat Bandit, Nuns Lauded

PHILADELPHIA — Three Philadelphia nuns have been honored as heroines for choking, tackling and sitting on a would-be church bandit.

"The detectives said we shook the oomph out of him," said Sister Anita Cecilia, who with Sisters Marie Sullivan and Dorothy Payne helped collar the culprit.

Last Oct. 3 a man identified by police as Juan West, 18, and described as slender but powerful, emerged from a second-floor porch at St. Columba's Church, laden with books and religious garments.

Sister Dorothy, who is five feet and two inches tall, confronted the man, grabbed the hood of his jacket and threw him to the floor.

"I really was upset about choking him," Sister Dorothy said at police department award ceremonies Wednesday, "But . . . you do what you have to do."

However, West broke free of Sister Dorothy and bolted for a stairwell, where he encountered Maurice Myles, 14, one of the nuns' students. Myles made a flying leap onto the man's back from a stairway and knocked him flat.

That's when Sisters Marie and Anita arrived. They decided the best thing to do was to sit on West. Myles and two classmates did the same, and they, too, were cited for heroism.

Peace Prize To Activist?

BELFAST — Nobel peace prize winners Betty Williams and Mairead Corrigan said Thursday they have nominated imprisoned Argentine human rights activist Adolfo Perez Esquivel for the prize.

They said Esquivel, 47, "is the most outstanding non-violent activist alive." Esquivel, a sculptor and professor of architecture in Argentina, was detained without trial April 4, 1977, and has been in a Buenos Aires prison since.

The women, co-leaders of Northern Ireland's Peace People movement, won the 1976 peace prize for their attempt to end years of sectarian bloodshed in Northern Ireland.

"As far as we know he hasn't even been questioned, let alone charged with anything," Mrs. Williams said.

She said nominating Esquivel for the prize might put increased pressure on Argentine authorities to release him, even though they have rejected many appeals.

Esquivel, a human rights activist, was secretary-general of Servicio Paz y Justicia, which co-ordinates a network of non-violent organizations in Latin America.

ANN MURRAY HONORED

FREDERICTON — Popular singer Ann Murray said Thursday she was surprised when the University of New Brunswick, from which she graduated in 1967, offered her an honorary Doctor of Letters degree.

The degree was conferred during convocation exercises earlier in the day.

Miss Murray said she was surprised. "I think it's nice because they usually don't give honorary degree until there is no time left to enjoy it," she said.

Frye Given Medal

TORONTO — Prof. H. Northrop Frye, 65, author and world-renowned lecturer in English literature, was named Thursday as the 1978 recepient of the Royal Bank of Canada award.

The $50,000 cash award and gold medal is given annually to a Canadian "whose outstanding achievement is of such importance that it is contributing to human welfare and the common good."

Author of 16 books and hundreds of essays, articles and reviews, Frye writes and lectures at the University of Toronto.

Idi Grabs Guns

Pay Hike for Margaret

LONDON — Princess Margaret received a £4,002 ($8,102) increase in her state allowance Thursday, which indicates she will carry on with state duties after her impending divorce from Lord Snowdon.

The increase in Margaret's household budget was disclosed in the "civil list," the royal family's allocations from the taxpayer for the coming year. They were made public by Chancellor of the Exchequer Denis Healey.

Ten members of the royal family, including the Queen, received increases ranging up to 50 per cent. Margaret's increase is a modest 7.3 per cent, taking her annual stipend to £59,000 from £55,000 — $119,440 to $111,342.

The raise appears to confirm Margaret's intention to carry on with royal duties once she recovers from an attack of hepatitis and gastro-enteritis that landed her in a London hospital last week.

There had been speculation the end of Margaret's 18-year marriage to globe-trotting photographer Lord Snowdon might result in her retirement from public life, particularly as her friendship with aspiring pop singer and brewery heir Roddy Llewellyn has brought criticism.

Amin Won't Come: Official

EDMONTON (CP) — Uganda and President Idi Amin will not participate in the 1978 Commonwealth Games here Aug. 3-12, says David Akongo, Uganda's high commissioner to Canada.

"We have withdrawn officially so there shall be no confusion whatever," he said in a telephone interview from Ottawa on Thursday.

Akongo said his office delivered a note to Canada's external affairs department May 8 saying Uganda would not participate in the games.

The high commissioner said he was aware of reports to the contrary — that Uganda would be coming — but added Canada should pay attention to the diplomatic note.

"You should rely on the note rather than believe what this or that reporter claims has been told to him by this or other Ugandan."

Akongo said the contents of the diplomatic note were not made public under an agreement between the Ugandan and Canadian governments.

Eric Morse, sports liaison officer for the external affairs department, said the note basically stated that "because of public comments in Canada they were withdrawing."

There were reports that Amin would attempt to come to Canada as coach of the Ugandan boxing team.

Status Clarified for UFAWU

OTTAWA (CP) — Labor Minister John Munro has agreed to take steps to give the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union (UFAWU) conventional union status under federal law, George Hewison, union executive-secretary, said Thursday.

In an interview after an appearance before the Commons fisheries committee, Hewison said Munro said he and the justice department would make a reference to the Supreme Court to get clarification on whether the union is under federal or provincial jurisdiction.

The minister also promised to amend the labor code "to put into law the rights we have enjoyed for 100 years — the power to set fish prices and labor rates for our members," Hewison said.

He and union president Jack Nichol also met Corporate Affairs Minister Warren Allmand to discuss changes to the combines law. The UFAWU is under a combines investigation and also seven executive members face charges of impeding the investigation.

The impeding charges were laid after the UFAWU officials picketed sites of the combines hearing into the union. Government officials have never said specifically what they were investigating about the union. The hearing has been adjourned indefinitely.

Hewison told members of the fisheries committee there is a serious communications problem between West Coast fishermen and the federal department.

That was evident in a lack of consultation with his union on negotiations with the U.S. on maritime boundaries, a fisheries agreement and salmon interceptions, he said.

"The fishermen are just being put on the sidelines to watch as third-party bystanders," he said. One result was that Canada was in danger of being outflanked by the Americans.

They had already got Canada to close one of its fishing grounds — Swiftsure Banks off Vancouver Island — in hopes of getting extended salmon fishing for Canadian trollers off Washington State.

"We're closing Canadian waters to Canadian fishermen when already there's an imbalance in salmon interceptions between the countries" in favor of the U.S.

The U.S. takes in excess of five million Canadian salmon while Canada gets two million American fish, he said. Alaskan fishermen take more salmon from Canadian rivers which flow through the Alaskan Panhandle than Canadians take off Washington State.

Nichol said to make matters worse, Canada is considering giving to the U.S. an extra 14 miles of territory in the Dixon Entrance between the Queen Charlotte Islands and the Panhandle as part of a boundaries agreement.

Besides distorting salmon fishing for B.C. trollers, the move could open the door to the Americans building a supertanker port in the Panhandle with supertankers going through the Dixon Entrance.

That would undo all the good that was accomplished with the Canadian decision not to allow an oilport to be built at Prince Rupert, he said.

MISLEADING SEARS AD NETS FINE

MONTREAL (CP) — Simpsons-Sears Ltd. was fined $1,500 in sessions court Thursday after pleading guilty to publishing "false or misleading advertising" in its spring catalogue.

The charge, laid under the combines investigation act following an investigation by representatives of the federal department of consumer and corporate affairs, said the catalogue labelled double-knit polyester boys' suits as "Made in Quebec" when in fact they wre made in Taiwan.

N.B. Spray Bill Overrides All

FREDERICTON (CP) — The New Brunswick government intends to introduce legislation that will allow it to apply anti-budworm insecticide over forests even if the land-owner objects, Natural Resources Minister Roland Boudreau announced Thursday.

The announcement follows a New Brunswick Supreme Court decision Wednesday that the government has no legal right to spray the insecticide over forests without the owner's consent and is trespassing if it does.

The legislation is expected to be introduced in the legislature today, Boudreau said. The spray program, planned this year to cover about four million acres, is expected to begin in about a week.

The legislation was likened to a similar bill which allows the government to enter private property without consent to fight forest fires.

Boudreau said the government will continue to try to avoid spraying property owners don't want sprayed, but he said the bill will give the government the power to spray over their objections if necessary.

$2M Contract Given Through PM's Pal: PC

OTTAWA (CP) — A Progressive Conservative suggested Thursday night a Montreal firm got $2 million in computer processing contracts because it is headed by a school friend of Prime Minister Trudeau's Quebec lieutenant.

Dan McKenzie (Winnipeg South Centre) told the Commons:

"I have information that the president of the Montreal-based firm Industrial Life Technological Services, Mr. Philip LeMay, was a school chum of the minister responsible for housing (Andre Ouellet).

"The company was the firm which was awarded computer contracts.

Ouellet is Trudeau's spokesman in Quebec.

McKenzie raised the matter for the second time Thursday while protesting that the firm got government contracts without being low bidder. Supply Minister Jean-Pierre Goyer told him earlier the contracts were awarded as a normal means of distributing federal purchases to regions.

McKenzie raised the matter after published reports quoted Ontario-based computer firms protesting a shift in business to the Quebec company. Account had been taken of socio-economic considerations, the reports said.

As described to McKenzie by Aideen Nicholson, Goyer's parliamentary assistant, in the Commons Thursday night there were two contracts.

One was let by the health department for four years. Three firms submitted similar bids and "another criteria" was used to determine the winner.

When McKenzie raised the matter during the question period early Thursday, Goyer said it is normal for the department to ensure a "better distribution of government purchases through the country.

Don't sign any mortgage until you read this.

It's in your best interest to get our rates... Whether you're planning to buy a home or refinance your own, you owe it to yourself to shop around for a mortgage. Compare our five-year interest rates with credit unions, trust and insurance companies. We think you'll find we're at least a quarter percent, and as much as a half percent, lower on both NHA and Conventional mortgages. If you think that doesn't sound like much, think again. Because, on a $40,000 mortgage over five years, 1/4% will save you more than $400—and 1/2% will save you more than $800.

10¼% CONVENTIONAL

We offer the best group mortgage life insurance you can buy... No, mortgage insurance isn't mandatory with us, but it's a good idea. Since we're one of the largest mortgage lenders in Canada, our group rates are the lowest you can get. In fact, it costs only 13¢ per thousand dollars for people under thirty. Which amounts to as little as $5.20 a month on a $40,000 mortgage. And, should the unthinkable happen, your mortgage will be paid in full, and your family will be left with a home instead of a debt.

LIFE

...and come to terms with inflation for five full years. With most mortgages, you're allowed up to twenty-five years to repay. But they are usually subject to renewal on the basis of a one, three or five year term. Which simply means that at the end of each and every term, the prevailing rate of interest, at that time, is applied to the renewal. We believe we have the lowest rate available today. And, because we only offer a five year term, we can guarantee our low rate for the longest time. Regardless of rate increases, or the economy, or what's fast becoming old-fashioned inflation.

5 YEARS

...and we offer friendly advice, with a free information booklet and mortgage calculator. Before you make an offer to purchase—or even before you go looking for a house or a mortgage—you must work out a budget and know what you can afford. Our free booklet and calculator give you many answers. For instance, mortgages can be obtained for up to 95% of the value and up to $75,000. And we can also tell you about other important details like our liberal pre-payment privileges, for example.

Gov't Rushes Bills For June Break

OTTAWA (CP) — The government is determined to adjourn the Commons for a summer recess no later than the end of June and has shortened a list of legislation it wants passed before then.

Deputy Prime Minister Allan MacEachen confirmed Thursday the hoped for adjournment date announced earlier by Prime Minister Trudeau.

MacEachen told the Commons there are many bills before MPs but said "even an optimist like myself would hardly hope that the House would deal with them all before the end of June."

He told Conservative House Leader Walter Baker that new legislation may be introduced before then but that he could not say for certain.

MacEachen said the priority legislation includes two bills that implement the measures in the April 10 budget. One deals with the controversial sales tax cuts and the other would extend tarriff reductions on a wide range of imported goods.

The Liberal government has scheduled debate of those two bills for this week and next.

MPs are also slated to deal with a bill providing for the use of English and French in the courts and another giving more money to the Export Development Corporation before they leave Ottawa, probably until the fall — unless Prime Minister Trudeau calls an election for then.

Opposition spokesmen warned MacEachen it would be unrealistic to expect the Commons to pass legislation that would tie public service wage increases to those in the private sector before the planned recess.

The bill, which would also give the cabinet authority to ban public service strikes during election campaigns, has drawn strong opposition from organized labor.

GET JINGLING, BANKS TOLD

OTTAWA (CP) — The government moved Thursday to put more jingle into Christmas by encouraging the banks to buy more coins from the mint.

The finance department says banks have not been ordering enough coins because they can't count them as part of their cash reserves.

That often meant coin shortages could develop, particularly at Christmas.

But a change in the proposed Bank Act would allow the banks to count coins when calculating their reserves, a move it is hoped will encourage the banks to order more.

Gold coins are not included in the new provision.

At the end of last year, the banks held $53 million in Canadian coin, excluding gold coins, compared to about $4.5 billion in reserves.

Gift Baby Bottle A Hazard: MP

OTTAWA (CP) — Saskatchewan MP Lorne Nystrom has asked the federal government to ban the disposable baby bottles distributed by baby formula companies to new mothers in maternity gift packs.

Nystrom (NDP—Melville-Yorkton) told Consumer Affairs Minister Warren Allmand in the Commons Thursday that the bottles, which he says are made of cheap glass which can fragment when sterilized, may pose a health hazard to infants.

The bottles are not to be used more than once but in fact are used over and over by many mothers, he said.

Allmand said the department is investigating the problem although officials are not yet prepared to ban the gift packages.

"Our department will be working with the manufacturers of these bottles and other feeding systems to ensure that the hazards are clearly declared in the packages and that other measures are taken to prevent the misuses of them," the minister said.

The bottles are distributed by Mead Johnson, Ross Laboratories and Wyeth Laboratories. Nystrom said the warnings against re-use now contained in the packages are ambiguous and confusing.

Instructions indicate the bottles should be discarded after use and are disposable, but do not indicate they must not be used more than once.

PC Queries 'Prompted By U.S. Corporations'

OTTAWA (CP)- Energy Minister Alastair Gillespie Thursday accused Progressive Conservative finance critic Sinclair Stevens of speaking for large United States corporate interests.

Stevens, who for the last nine months has been relentlessly demanding that the government release a series of confidential documents describing the growth and workings of a uranium cartel set up in 1972 by the government in conjunction with the country's uranium producers, needled Gillespie for hiding vital information from the Canadian people.

Gillepie countered with: "I have come to the conclusion the member from York Simcoe has misjudged this issue many months ago and is now trying to wriggle off," while Stevens fumed in his seat.

"I am pleased to have smoked him out at last. He is clearly identifying himself with the interests of the United States and United States corporations."

Gillespie told the House the only reason Stevens had been pushing so long and hard for information on the uranium marketing arrangement was that he was trying to obtain evidence for a number of U.S. federal and state investigations into the Canadian uranium industry.

He said most Canadians were pleased their government had the foresight, courage and backbone to help the uranium industry survive the troubled period it went through in the 1960s, when the United States decided to stop buying Canadian uranium.

"If we had not reacted it would have spelled the end of the industry," Gillespie said.

Stevens agreed the industry had gone through a difficult period in the 1960s and early 1970s,

"The government has made history in a dubious sort of way by making Canda the nation which set up the first energy cartel since the end of the Second World War. The government chose secret backroom conspiracies with little regard for the Canadian people."

TAXMAN WINS LETTER FIGHT

EDMONTON (CP) — An Alberta Supreme Court judge has ruled that Revenue Canada can charge anyone for refusing to file an income tax return simply on the basis of an unanswered letter.

Mr. Justice Tevie Miller said Wednesday that if the taxman sends a letter asking a person to file a return and the letter is ignored that's enough reason to lay a charge.

The decision appeared to end a long string of successful challenges of the Income Tax Act by John Bell, a developer in Spruce Grove, Alta.

Bob Hladun, Bell's lawyer, said that as owner of Rockville Holdings Ltd. and Challenge Homes Ltd. his client has been asked about 30 times to produce income tax returns for the companies for years long gone by.

Layoffs 'Make-Work Ploy'

TORONTO (CP) — The Public Service Alliance of Canada says a federal government make-work program is using non-union workers to do the same jobs as laid-off workers, some of whom are alliance members.

The union says the basis of its complaint is the layoff of 232 term employees from the Ontario offices of the Canada Employment and Immigration Commission at the end of March.

The layoff took place about a month after 785 new term employees were hired under the Federal Labor Intensive Program.

The labor program was introduced last December to provide jobs lasting up to six months less a day in regions of high unemployment and to do work for 15 federal departments that otherwise would not be done.

An employee hired for six months less a day is not entitled to the benefits of a collective agreement and the alliance, an umbrella union for about 177,000 federal workers, says the program undermines the union.

The union says workers in the program are doing the same jobs as laid-off alliance members, but the commission says the program workers do different work than the laid-off employees had been doing.

Bill Doherty, an alliance vice-president, said in an interview that 12 out of 15 persons laid off at immigration offices in Toronto at the end of March were rehired five days later under the labor program in a higher classification at higher salary, but without protection of the union contract.

Tony Galasso, Ontario public affairs manager for the commission, said the 12 were hired because they could help the commission through the transition period to the new Immigration Act, which went into effect April 10.

However, Doherty said many area offices are short-staffed because of the layoffs and the other workers are being used to get normal work done.

Competition Seen As Post-AIB Curb

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal anti-inflation board says that although wage and price controls end for most retailers just in time for the Christmas rush, competition will keep prices from rising significantly.

The anti-inflation controls end in October for the majority of major retailers.

In its current consumer information bulletin, the board says that "when prices are increased over the coming months, they will occur generally to meet increases in costs of merchandise and operating expenses such as wages and occupancy.

"But retailers say they will not be in a position to pass along all these extra costs to the consumer, mainly because of competition."

The board says competition has been so strong in the retail market—department stores, clothing, home furnishings, dry goods and specialty stores—that competition has done more to keep prices down in the last two years than board regulations have.

"Retailers interviewed agreed that controls had not been a major influence on their operations, but said the program had had a psychological effect on retailers to hold down their prices and on consumers to make them more price-conscious."

The board also says in its bulletin that it has asked insurance companies with excess revenues to structure the return of funds to policy holders in a way that the benefits are not contingent on customers' renewing their policies.

Insurance companies have been ordered to dispose of excess revenues by June 30.

In 1976, insurance companies made more than $100 million in excess of the profit margin permitted by board guidelines. Rebates and reduced rates in 1977 disposed of the excess profit, the board says.

Although not all year-end results for 1977 have been filed yet, indications are that virtually all insurance lines made money last year, compared with only the auto insurance line in 1976, the board says.

Don't Scratch, Grits Told

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau insists he never encouraged the Liberal party to gear up for a summer general election, yet national organizers sent candidates special campaign manuals called "Readiness '78" with detailed instructions on canvassing, dress and how to perform on television.

The manual bears a smiling campaign picture of Trudeau and advises candidates against everything from "scratching" and "jingling coins in pocket" to lecturing television audiences.

The advice is similar to that sent to Progressive Conservative candidates in a similar manual delivered earlier this spring when election fever was at its peak.

The Liberal document tells first-time candidates that the party realizes they may "feel awkward and nervous" in some situations.

"This is normal," it says, reminding those running that people around them are often as shy and nervous as candidates themselves.

"In these situations, take the initiative. Say hello, introduce yourself, break the ice."

The manual urges candidates to dress neatly — "don't be too flashy" — and to spend time with a friend who will point out distracting nervous habits. These include coin jingling, scratching and "not looking at the person you are talking to."

Candidates are urged to bring their husbands or wives to as many events as possible.

But spouses are warned to defer to the candidate "if and when questioned by anyone on any matters even remotely associated with political policy."

The manual also delicately reminds spouses they shouldn't "count on the candidate being able to carry his or her usual workload around the house during the campaign." Most candidates are men.

POLICE STUCK WITH THE TAB

OTTAWA (CP) — City council has refused to put up $5,000 in taxpayers' money to subsidize a $20-a-plate (with wine) annual convention banquet planned in August for 600 police chiefs and spouses from across Canada.

But council did approve Wednesday spending $10,000 the police department had in its budget for hospitality for the visitors.

The $15,000 from the city and the police department would have helped pay for a $2,400 reception and a $10,000-$14,000 meal at the Chateau Laurier hotel; a 10-piece band to entertain for three evenings for $2,400; and $1,080 to cover coffee breaks during the five-day convention.

"Where do we sign up for this?" asked apparently amazed alderman Georges Bedard.

Canadians In Exercise

OTTAWA (CP) — Two Canadian squadrons will participate in a NATO military exercise in Norway May 26-June 3.

The defence department said in a statement about 60 people from squadrons at Bagotville, Que., and Cold Lake, Alta., will take part in the exercise.

The Canadian forces CF-5s will join aircraft from other NATO countries in visual and photographic reconnaissance of simulated land and sea targets in Norway, Denmark and surrounding waters.

Seaport Flattened

RANGOON (AP) — A cyclone with winds up to 160 kilometres an hour Wednesday wiped out the island seaport of Kyaukpyu, 320 kilometres (200 miles) northwest of Rangoon. Details were unavailable but reports said the town was flattened in three hours.

SYS-TEM
DUTOX Systemic Insect Killer
WEEDRITE
Lawn Weedkiller

Get Tough
If you want to win your annual war against sneaky bugs and filthy weeds, Chipman suggests you stop pussy-footing around. And start getting tough. Use Chipman's tough garden care products—the ultimate solution in the war on bugs, weeds and plant disease.
DUTOX® Insecticide
Aphids. Mites. Leaf Miners. Caterpillars. Spruce budworms. You may not recognise them on sight, but chances are you are familiar with the damage they cause to flowers, shrubs and small trees. The answer is DUTOX systemic insecticide spray that kills bugs on contact. It is also absorbed by the plant to kill sucking and chewing insects that feed on its juices.
SYS-TEM® 2-E Insect Control
If the leaves of your birch trees turn brown in early summer, chances are, birch leaf miners are the culprits. You can easily solve this problem in early spring at bud burst, by painting a band around the trunk with SYS-TEM 2-E. The insecticide is then absorbed and carried to the leaves to kill these destructive leaf miners. SYS-TEM 2-E is also effective as a spray against a host of other pests on ornamentals. Contains Dimethoate.
WEEDRITE® Grass and Weed Control
Everything has its place. But unwanted weeds and grasses have no place on your patio, along your driveway, fence lines and sidewalks. So get tough with WEEDRITE. This unique, granular weedkiller is dissolved in water and applied with a watering can. Kills all unwanted green growth on contact. It can also be safely used around trees, shrubs and ornamentals as it becomes completely deactivated on contact with the soil and is therefore harmless to plant roots.
LAWN WEEDKILLER®
A KILLEX* liquid formulation that controls dandelions, plantains, chickweed, clover, ragweed and other pesky lawn invaders. Two tablespoons in a gallon of water sprays 250 sq. ft. of lawn.

Privilege Protects Holt's 'Slander'

OTTAWA (CP) — Simma Holt (L—Vancouver-Kingsway) was accused Thursday of using the protection of the Commons to hurt the reputation of a health and welfare official.

Kenneth Robinson, parliamentary secretary to Health Minister Monique Begin, said Mrs. Holt is damaging the reputation of the head of the health protection branch, whom she has attacked twice in the last month, but never named.

MPs cannot be sued for statements made in the Commons.

Mrs. Holt asked Thursday night if the official recommended the banning of cyclamate, an artificial sweetener, to help a "special interest group who may want to remove competition."

The MP, who in the past has asked for an investigation into a possible link between the banning of saccharin and sugar companies, said cyclamate was banned in 1970 because it was supposed to cause cancer.

The same official insisting on that ban had said recently there is no evidence that it causes cancer.

Asked the name of the official outside the Commons, Mrs. Holt said, "I'd better not say it — I can't give you any statement I made in the House."

She said the ban meant financial ruin for a number of small British Columbia businesses and no one can count the number of victims — diabetics and overweight people — seriously injured or killed by the ban.

The fact that one official was able to make such a major decision without any discussion by Parliament raises the question of who runs Canada, she said.

"Are the officials or the elected representatives in charge?"

The cyclamate and saccharin bans have been a favorite subject of Mrs. Holt.

Earlier this week she asked Miss Begin to reconsider the bans.

"In view of the fact that the head of the health protecton branch precipitated the arbitrary and total ban of cyclamate . . . and since the same spokesman stated just last week that the great preponderance of world evidence indicates that cyclamate does not produce cancer, would the minister reconsider the competence of that person?"

Miss Begin defended the official.

Robinson said Thursday that Mrs. Holt is confusing two people — the former head of the food and drug directorate and the current head of the health protection branch.

The 1970 cyclamate ban was recommended by officials of the food and drug directorate. The health protection branch did not exist then.

"The then director-general of the food and drug directorate has since retired. I understand he was consiered highly qualified and is still in great demand as an international expert."

Robinson said a court which upheld the cyclamate ban found that the official "acted prudently, expeditiously, and reasonably in the public interest."

BAND WO FOUND GUILTY

OTTAWA (CP) — Warrant Officer Ken Cooper was found not guilty by a court-martial Thursday of stealing $93,000 worth of musical equipment from the Canadian Forces band.

But the six-man jury found Cooper, 51, guilty of stealing $18,500 in public funds by falsifying petty-cash vouchers and forging signatures.

Cooper was to be sentenced today. The maximum sentence for the theft conviction is seven years.

On the equipment charges, the prosecution had claimed Cooper put to his own use an array of equipment he had purchased with public funds.

Military Funeral For Bear Victims

PEMBROKE, Ont. (CP) — A military funeral was held Thursday at nearby Canadian Forces Base Petawawa for three air cadets killed by a bear while on a fishing trip earlier this week in Algonquin Park.

George Halfkenny, 16, his brother, Mark, 12, and William Rhindress, 15, were buried after the service in the Calvin United Church cemetery in this community.

The partially-eaten bodies of the youths were found Monday in the park about 35 kilometres west of here. Autopsies indicated they were mauled to death by a bear.

About 300 persons crowded into the chapel at Petawawa and spilled out onto the lawn for the service.

Later in Owen Sound, Frank Miller, Ontario minister of natural resources, said his ministry had done all it could in the incident. He said his ministry issued a press release warning people to avoid black bears, but he felt his office could not overreact to something that he said had not happened for more than 80 years.

Buy Canadian, NDP Urges

OTTAWA (CP) — The government should start a self sufficiency in food program leading with a Buy-Canadian campaign, Saskatchewan MP Lorne Nystrom (NDP-Yorkton-Melville) said today.

"Buy Canadian would help Canada's farmers, provide more jobs in the processing industry and reduce the drain on our foreign exchange created by food imports," Nystrom, the NDP's food and agriculture critic, said in a statement.

"Food self-sufficiency is a sensible approach to strengthening the Canadian economy," Nystrom said. "The government should consider this approach at once."

One step in a Buy-Canadian campaign would be requiring food products to be labelled by country of origin so consumers could choose.

The trade department has started a $500,000 Shop-Canadian campaign and the agriculture department should be able to mount a similar program with additional research and policy initiatives, Nystrom said.

He also called on the government to establish an interdepartmental group to develop policies for:

—The education and promotion among consumers of the advantages of buying Canadian food products;

—The co-ordination of existing production, marketing and promotion policies at the federal and provincial level;

—The re-assessment of existing tariff structures and regulations and import quotas on such commodities as cheese and beef;

—The recommendation of appropriate marketing legislation and production incentives, particularly in fruit and vegetable production and processing;

—The research and promotion of measures to reduce energy requirements in agriculture.

Nystrom said food self-sufficiency could add 50,000 jobs in Ontario and 19,000 jobs in British Columbia.

Canada paid $96 million for 21 imported foodstuffs in 1976 that could have been produced domestically and could have generated $51 million in wages.

NOBODY CAME TO THIS PARTY

EDMONTON (CP) — Only 22 people showed up at the Jubilee Auditorium for a meeting of the One Canada party.

While Harry Belafonte sang to a packed house upstairs, the party made its political debut in Edmonton to an all-but-empty room downstairs.

Elmer Knutson of Edmonton, party chairman, told the gathering that the "single most dangerous person in Canada" is Prime Minister Trudeau.

"We must stop him or he'll turn this country into a socialist dictatorship," said Knutson, looking at 350 empty chairs.

However, he said the party will support other candidates for Parliament if they endorse the party's platform. For example, the party intends to run Alex Miller, an Edmonton accountant, against Opposition Leader Joe Clark in the Yellowhead riding.

Knutson said candidates the party supports would have to be "a little bit to the right," adding that the party platform includes an end to deficit budgeting and bilingualism, overhauling the unemployment insurance scheme, strengthening police powers, and tighter control on immigration.

He said he wasn't too concerned about the small gathering, comparing the One Canada party to a prairie fire that spreads rapidly once going and forces the animals out of the bush for easy shooting.

Levesque Soothes Americans

NEW YORK (CP) — Rene Levesque projected a soothing tone today as he faced an interview before a national American television audience.

The Quebec premier, interviewed by Tom Brokaw on the NBC show Today, deflected suggestions that his Parti Quebecois government aims at mass nationalizations and said his language policy is not designed to impose tyranny on anyone.

Levesque said his government wants to buy out certain areas of the resource industry, but also wants a healthy private sector in an independent Quebec.

"We don't have a dogma, a gospel," he said of nationalization plans.

"The dominant, the overwhelmingly dominant part of our economy would be private," he said, adding that there was also room for co-operative ventures involving both public and private investment.

Ottawa Drags Heels On Year of the Child

OTTAWA (CP) — Organizers of next year's International Year of the Child (IYC) say they are still waiting for federal support for a committee to help advance the rights and interests of children.

Andrew Cohen, chairman of the Canadian IYC committee, a coalition of nearly 200 national organizations, said Thursday the health department has not yet confirmed it will provide representation or financial support. The department is federal representative in the project.

Cohen, who two weeks ago sent a letter to Prime Minister Trudeau asking that a federal spokesman be sent to a national IYC meeting June 9, says he has had no response.

Committee members plan to establish a national commission representing business, labor and government "in the spirit of co-operation and commitment to children during 1979 and beyond."

Cohen says committee members fear that unnecessary government delay may result in hasty and inadequate last-minute planning for IYC projects.

Maker Defends Children's Seat

OTTAWA (CP) — The manufacturer of one of the most popular children's car seats defended his product Thursday and attacked the "publicity seekers" who have said it should be removed from the market.

Leo Swartz, president of the Dorel Co. Ltd. in Montreal, manufacturer of the Dorel Trav-L-Guard children's car seat, challenged the Consumers' Association of Canada (CAC) to prove a child had been killed or injured because of his car seat.

"I want them to prove to me that one of our seats was at fault for the injury or death of a child," Swartz said.

Swartz accused the CAC of being irresponsible for asking the federal consumer affairs department to remove the Dorel Trav-L-Guard from the market because of its poor performance in crash tests.

The Trav-L-Guard was one of seven seats sold in Canada which failed to meet part of the federal standard in government-sponsored tests conducted in January.

Police Accused of Brutality

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Tribune says it has found "overwhelming evidence" that a small number of Winnipeg policemen regularly assault persons in their custody.

The newspaper says the number of policemen involved is only between three and eight but evidence suggests other members of the force occasionally resort to rough tactics.

The findings are being published as part of a special series which the newspaper says was prompted by two recent court cases and other complaints it has received about the conduct of Winnipeg policemen.

The series is the result of three weeks of research which included interviews with lawyers, judges, criminals and former and present policemen.

Other conclusions the Tribune draws from its research include the following:

—Convictions or disciplinary action against members of the Winnipeg police force are rare. The newspaper says this is partly because policemen are normally the only witnesses to asssaults by other policemen and partly because of the procedures in place to handle complaints of brutality.

—Juveniles are among those likely to be abused, perhaps because of frustration among policemen at the lenient treatment of young offenders by the courts.

—Abusive tactics by policemen are sometimes condoned by immediate supervisors in the department but not by higher-ranking police officials.

—The apparent motivation for rough tactics in many cases is the desire by policemen to obtain signed confessions, rather than being forced to collect independent evidence for use in court.

—Persons arrested by police are sometimes denied access to lawyers. Because of this, an accused person may sign a confession before he has had the benefit of legal advice.

Chief Norm Stewart has described the series as largely a rehash of cases already on the public record. He also has expressed concern that the articles may be prejudicial to at least one case now before the courts.

Escapers Caught In East

Two William Head escapers — one of them free for more than 18 months — have been arrested by police in Toronto, Colwood RCMP said today.

Anthony Vito Genovese, 31, and John Glendon Flett, 27, were picked up overnight.

Details of the arrest are unclear but it is understood they were together at the time.

Flett, who had been convicted of drug offences, disappeared last Dec. 27 while out on a temporary absence pass to spend Christmas with his parents.

Genovese fled the medium security prison Jan. 1, 1977, also while out on a temporary absence pass. He was serving time for bank robbery in Vancouver.

The police spokesman said Flett will be returned to Victoria to face charges of escape and being unlawfully at large.

He said Genovese is facing charges in Toronto.

Deputy A-G Owns Stock In Sunk Ferry's Company

Attorney-General Garde Gardom said Thursday his deputy Richard Vogel owns 20 per cent of the issued stock in a firm involved with the Lady Grace, the vessel which sank in Vancouver harbor earlier this week.

Gardom said that Vogel purchased shares in Lakex Mines Ltd. in the early 1970s and served as secretary and a director until his resignation on June 30, 1977, following his appointment as deputy attorney-general.

Gardom was replying to questions by Don Lockstead (NDP—Mackenzie) who wanted to know if Vogel was involved in any way with Lakex and Coal Harbor Maritime Leasing Ltd.

Gardom said an investigation into the sinking is being conducted by the Canadian Pacific Railway police and Vancouver police.

The Lady Grace, the former B.C. Ferries vessel Langdale Queen, sank Sunday after being flooded by fresh water pouring in from a shore connection.

The vessel was sold last year for $50,000 by the government to Coal Harbor Maritime Leasing Ltd., which intended to convert it into a floating office building and senior citizens' centre.

The company now is bankrupt, and the conversion has never been made. Lakex, which took over the project from Coal Harbor after lending the company $350,000, lost its lease on the mooring space in March from CP Rail's Marathon Realty.

The Lady Grace now is occupying space leased to a consortium. The B.C. government foreclosed last week on its $50,000 mortage to Coal Harbor and the ship was seized.

Gardom said that even though Vogel had disassociated himself from Lakex June 30, the corporate records in the companies office were not changed until Oct. 25 "which was an oversight on its part."

He said that Vogel had never served as the firm's lawyer even though he was listed as attorney for the company which was incorporated in Ontario and registered in B.C. as an extra-provincial company.

Gardom said the attorney in this case is the person who is designated in B.C. under the Companies Act to accept service of process on behalf of the firm.

Vogel became acting attorney-general Aug. 1 and was confirmed as deputy attorney-general Sept 10.

In replies to question by Lockstead on Wednesday, Recreation Minister Sam Bawlf told the legislature that the vessel was sold to Coal Harbor which placed the second highest bid.

He said the five bids ranged from $52,000 to $1.

The minister said that the B.C. Ferry Corp. obtained a mortgage on the ferry as a form of performance bond to ensure that the vessel would be used under certain terms as a public amenity for the non-profit organizations in the area.

He said the vessel was paid for in full.

Make Room For Boaters

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Victoria Chamber of Commerce is asking Victoria waterfront owners to let tourists moor at their docks this summer as a gesture of goodwill, harbor and waterways director Ian Cairns said today.

"This is a summer to be tolerant," he said. "If someone ties up at your dock, don't go running out with a shotgun. Let him know he is welcome."

With the Cook festivities centring on the waterfront, thousands of boats of various sizes will be coming to the city.

"They will be tying up to anything that doesn't move," he said.

"Obviously we don't have enough mooring space for everyone at the Inner Harbor. They will be looking for any available waterfront location."

Cairns urged waterfront owners to erect signs announcing that visitors are welcome to tie up their boats.

The chamber will also be asking companies on the waterfront to make their docks available for an overnight tie-up.

"It should be possible, for example, for a company to erect a sign saying tie-ups are welcome but the dock must be clear for business at 9 a.m. Something like that."

Meanwhile, the chamber and the Visitors Information Centre are organizing a tourist kiosk at the customs building on Wharf St. where boating visitors will be able to obtain information on moorage as well as obtain data on hotels, restaurants, medical services and stores in Greater Victoria.

"Everything will be coordinated through that one centre. This procedure will be well-organized but, despite our best efforts, there will be a lot of milling about of boats and people. The thing to remember is everything will work out fine if we are courteous and friendly."

Among ideas being discussed, he said, is creation of a yellow disc as a sign that tourists are welcome to tie up.

70,000 kids will be leaving home for the Great Camping Experience

. . . not all of them all that willingly

By AB KENT

In the nine weeks from July 1 more than 70,000 B.C. children will pack up and leave home.

That's how many youngsters will be herded, persuaded, shepherded and simply sent out of town for the Great Annual Camp Experience.

For some it will be a new venture, not to be confused with tents or mobile campers; for others it means an event as regular as the coming of summer.

At places with names like Lac-a-Mihnt, Ooshawama, and Lonesome Lake, the preparations for summer are in full flight — there are cabins to be painted, shingles to nail, boats to float, floats to fix and meadows to mow.

Weekend work parties have firmly entrenched their martyrdom as volunteers in the cause of The Camping Experience.

By now most of the youngsters who are going to camp this year will be registered at one of the estimated 70 non-profit church, institution or agency facilities to be found in outdoors B.C.

But while for many people in this province forest camps are synonymous with summer, they are not the hardy perennial so familiar to Eastern Canada where in Ontario alone there are hundreds.

Residents of the Lower Mainland and Vancouver Island are perhaps best familiar with the summer camp as an institution, since many of them are located within easy reach of the metropolitan centres.

Two of the better known are the Y camps serving Greater Vancouver — Elphinstone on Sechelt Peninsula — and Victoria — Camp Thunderbird at Glinz Lake in the Sooke Hills. There are also George Pringle Camp operated by the United Church at Shawnigan; YaWaCa Camp run by the YWCA on Salt Spring Island; Camp Squamish at Brackendale, owned by the Easter Seal Society; Camp Columbia, an Anglican camp on Thetis Island.

Two examples of non-sectarian camps are Strathcona Park Lodge, an outdoor education centre at Buttle Lake, and Outward Bound, at Keremeos.

Of the total number of camps in operating condition, 34 are accredited to the 90-member B.C. Camping Association, a voluntary organization that sets standards to be maintained by its member camps over and above requirements of the provincial health department's community care licensing board.

The expected total of 1978 campers is an estimate by Nancy Greig, co-ordinator of the Camping Association in Vancouver. Although it is nearly all children, the figure includes some adults who may take part in retreats, special outings, family programs and camps for the handicapped.

Youngsters are mostly in the 8-16 age group and largely on the younger side, Greig said.

Fully two-thirds will be attending accredited camps, most of which will be open only for a few weeks in the summer holiday period, a wasted asset the rest of the year.

Some opened during the Easter school break and will resume when the school year ends in June.

Greig said more and more are looking for extended season usage by winterizing the traditionally basic facilities. She said this is one answer to the high cost of maintaining property today, by raising income from business meetings, conventions or other public use in the off-camping season.

Winterizing means installing frost-proof plumbing and improving heating and insulation, providing extra custodial services such as snow plowing, or perhaps housekeeping.

Most have permanent buildings that lend themselves to winterizing and others have little more than draughty, unfinished shelters without plumbing, electric power or heaters, adequate for summer but expensive to upgrade for year-round use.

Among the association's conditions for accreditation are certification of waterfront directors as Red Cross water safety instructors, and they must be at least 19 years old. Leaders must have two years' experience besides university graduation and all necessary permits and insurance must be carried.

For member camps, all applications forms are uniform, and all camps must have one counsellor for every 10 children aged eight or more, and one counsellor for each eight children less than eight years old.

At least one counsellor or director must hold a valid St. John Ambulance first aid certificate; there must be properly licensed drivers and vehicles; health, sanitation and fire safety must be observed.

"We are covering not only what the Health Act specifies, but a little more as well," Greig said.

A member of the community care board said he could recall only one camp which had to close after failing to meet licensing standards, having operated a while on an interim permit.

Both the association and licensing authority inspect camps from time to time.

Camping associations believe parents should try to learn as much as possible about a camp before deciding to send their children off for the holidays.

Parking Tickets Slam New Moped Business

By DEREK SIDENIUS

Neil Patterson's new rent-a-moped business has run into a snag even before it's off the ground — parking tickets.

And it's costing him plenty. On Wednesday alone, he was nabbed six times. That works out to $60 in fines. Two of the tickets were for the same machine chained to a light standard in front of St. Andrew's Church on Douglas and left for several hours.

What really hurt is the owner of a 10-speed bike chained to the same standard didn't get a ticket.

"There just seems no way to satisfy them," says Patterson who set up his business in the parking lot behind Strathcona Hotel, 919 Douglas, only a week ago.

"The way things are going if this keeps up I'll be put out of business."

He says the problem is that the police classify mopeds as motor-vehicles and require them to be parked in normal parking spaces.

Patterson instructs riders to chain the mopeds to a fixed object such as a power pole or fire hydrant.

If the machines aren't chained, he says, someone could come along and walk off with them since they only weigh 85 pounds.

Patterson feels mopeds should be classed as bicycles for parking purposes and says he'll take his case to city council if necessary.

A month ago he appeared before council and won exemption from a licence fee which would have cost him $140 a year for each moped.

Council agreed to allow him to operate under a straight $30 a year trades licence.

Patterson, an unemployed carpenter and former navy shipwright, is sure the moped rental idea is a winner.

He's bought 33 of the machines and plans to expand to 100.

Last summer, he says, he carried out his own survey of American tourists in Victoria and found out their biggest beef was transportation.

The inexpensive, simple-to-operate moped is the answer, he says — as long as you can find a place to park without getting pinched.

Couple Blamed For Own Deaths

A coroner's jury Thursday night found a couple who died in a house fire April 30 responsible for their own deaths.

The jury said Catherine Dick, 21, and Patrick Jackson, 30, died as result of their own negligence.

The couple's nine-month-old son, Anthony, also died in the early morning fire that gutted an old two-storey house at 840 Bay.

The jury was told Jackson and Miss Dick had attended a party the evening prior to their deaths and were impaired.

Jackson had a blood alcohol reading of .26, and Miss Dick one of .28. The legal level of impairment is .08.

A passer-by rescued the couple's elder son, Gerald, 4, and a six-month-old relative, Marion Willie.

James McIntosh and Darryl Wilson, tenants of an upstairs apartment, jumped to safety as the fire engulfed the building.

Testimony given at an earlier hearing showed Gerald was in the habit of lighting fires in the house but his parents aparently thought they had controlled the problem.

Two Hit By Jolt From Line

Two men escaped with minor injuries Thursday when a ladder they were holding touched a 7,000-volt power line.

A Saanich police spokesman said Peter Yurcuhak, 32, of 2393 Eastdowne, and Darryl Stephenson, 20, of 660 Atkins, were putting up the ladder at the Dominion Observatory on Little Saanich Mountain.

The two were taken to Royal Jubilee Hospital where Yurcuhak was treated for minor burns. Stephenson complained of dizziness but appeared unharmed.

'Ivan, I've Got a Bad Problem'

A letter outlining the financial difficulties of an accused junior officer of HMCS Mackenzie was introduced as evidence at his court martial Thursday.

Fredericks, 29, former supply officer on the ship, has pleaded not guilty to the charges, one of which alleges theft of $3,520 in non-public funds by failure to account for them.

At the second day of the trial Thursday, military policeman M/WO Warren James Holm told the court he and an Esquimalt policeman with a warrant searched Frederick's home at 979 Thomas last Feb. 6.

Holm was asked to read its contents to the court.

The letter said: "Ivan, I've got a bad problem. It could quite easily be the death of me.

"It's dow (sic); money! I made a serious mistake that no one knows about and it's caused a shortage of money in the funds I'm responsible for on the ship."

The writer said he did not want to give details in writing or on the phone, but the amount $3,520 was specified.

"I've been covering it up in very illegal ways," the letter said.

"If I get found out I'll be court-marshalled (sic) and released. But to be quite honice (sic) I don't think I could wait around for that."

The writer said he had no means of repaying the funds and that he did not have five cents worth of credit.

"Life's a bummer," he wrote, "your (sic) my last and only hope."

Later he added: "Sometimes I think the easy way out would be the best."

Introduction of the letter followed a lengthy trial within a trial heard in the absence of a three-man disciplinary board.

The board re-entered the courtroom after judge advocate Lieut.-Col. A. K. Swainson ruled a quantity of evidence inadmissible.

He said he was not satisfied that statements allegedly made by the accused had been made freely or voluntarily and said there was a lack of information surrounding one aspect of the material which prosecuting officer Capt. Mel Hunt tried to introduce.

Swainson said he concluded the accused had not been properly cautioned during part of the investigation.

Capt. Bev Carey, staff officer for accounting services, maritime command Pacific, said when he began an audit of HMCS Mackenzie's operating accounts, he noticed a $3,520 discrepancy between journal and ledger figures and assumed a shortage of that amount.

The accused is represented by Maj. William Reed. The court martial continued today at HMCS Naden.

An unidentified shipping company took the sparkle out of the plan by shipping the fireworks to Toronto, of all places, instead of here.

Somewhat plaintively, the society says it hopes the public will turn out for the crowning ceremony of the May Queen Sunday night at 9:30 on the steps of the Legislative Buildings.

An ever-widening generation gap helped convince high school teacher F. Val Hinch he should retire early.

Hinch, an Esquimalt secondary school teacher, is quitting in June and one of the reasons he cited in a letter to the B.C. Teachers' Federation is the bad attitude of his students.

"I seem unable to alter my students' aversion to work, to stimulate their value of self-worth, or instil a sense of ambition and goals," the letter says.

"I am appalled by the way many abuse their bodies and minds with tobacco, drugs and alcohol."

"Their values are not mine and I am not about to accept theirs, so maybe I should get out."

Teachers over 55 should consider early retirement, Hinch recommends.

"You may be pleasantly surprised and at the same time be doing everyone a favor — even your students."

Last year, Town Talk suggested Oak Bay council should pay tribute to the architects of the much-lauded Recreation Centre.

Ever since the centre opened more than two years ago, there have been plaques on the wall just inside the front door paying tribute to the various politicians who had a hand in the Rec Centre.

Council agreed with Town Talk that the architects deserved credit along with the politicians — and now a plaque for them has been added to the wall.

He was promoted following retirement of Capt. Burt Toye, and can claim familiarity with a dozen types of aircraft following his air force experience — 13 years with the RCAF and six with the Royal Air Force.

Capt. Taylor, a resident of Victoria since joining the branch in 1974, spends about half his time in the air, the rest in administration, including the supervision of pilot training.

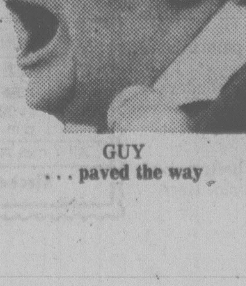
Guy's Goodbye to Heal Rift

There may be more to Len Guy stepping down as the secretary-treasurer of the B.C. Federation of Labor last week than he admits.

Labor and the NDP had a falling out after the 1975 defeat but the word is that the hard-line Guy's voluntary removal will pave the way for Gerry Stoney to become party president at the annual convention this weekend.

Stoney, president of the New Westminster local of the International Woodworkers of America union, is now second vice-president.

The election of a strong labor representative as president would be the final move in the three-year reconciliation process between labor and the party.



GUY
. . . paved the way

In 1976, just after the NDP defeat in December, Guy was defeated in his bid to take that traditional spot.

Some people within the party rumbled that Guy perhaps hadn't been as supportive of the NDP as he could have in the election a few months earlier.

Don't be surprised if he steps down so he can run in the next provincial election. He'd rather work in the front lines than in the administrative end.

Bruin Death Report Premature: Cherry

BOSTON (CP) — Maybe now, somebody will start to believe the members of Montreal Canadiens when they tell them that Boston Bruins are no pushovers.

Even though the Canadiens won the first two games of the best-of-seven final series in Montreal, including the second one in overtime, the sceptics said there was no chance the Bruins would be able to handle the defending Stanley Cup champions.

"The report of our death was premature," noted coach Don Cherry after the Bruins blanked the Canadiens 4-0, cutting Montreal's lead in the best-of-seven National Hockey League final to 2-1.

It was an excellent over-all show by the Bruins. They got a quick jump with first-period goals by Gary Doak and Rick Middleton and added third-period goals by Peter McNab and Terry O'Reilly.

They were aggressive from start to finish, playing smart and disciplined hockey to extend their home-ice unbeaten streak in the playoffs to six games.

Only 16 shots were directed at Boston goaltender Gerry Cheevers, who recorded his second playoff shutout against the Canadiens and his first since 1969.

It was the strong defensive showing, not that 36 shots Boston had at Ken Dryden that impressed the Boston coach the most.

"The game is not going to our heads," said Cherry. "This is it. This is the series. This is the one game we wanted, now we want the next one.

"As I told the maitre'd when we had our steaks in Montreal last Tuesday, 'we'll be back.'

"That was the best game of the playoffs for our defence. I am so proud our defence played well because if anybody gets maligned on our team, it's our defence.

"We play a tough way for a defence to survive. Usually three guys are in and there are often breakaways. They got some help tonight. They need some help from the forwards.

"We had a guy back all night. We had to stop the breakaways. Our defence stood up and Cheevers played a hell of a game.

"But it's only one game. If we had won the game in overtime, we'd be up 2-1. I thought we should have won on Tuesday in regulation time."

The Canadiens' room was understandably quiet because they fully understood what had happened to them. The Bruins made them look bad in front of 14,602 fans at Boston Garden and national television audiences in Canada and the United States.

Every facet of Montreal's game was off. They passed poorly, they shot erratically, they were losing crucial face-offs.

"I don't think it was as much as they did as it was what we didn't do," said Montreal defenceman Larry Robinson.

"We weren't skating. They got the puck out of their end fairly easy. If you can't fore-check them in their end, there's no middle ice here, so you're in your end all night.

"You are asking for trouble if you play in your end all night."

Had it not been for Ken Dryden, the final result could have been much more embarrassing to the proud Montreal organization.

He was particularly brilliant in the middle period when the Bruins had a 13-5 shooting edge and won 18 of 27 draws.

Get Ready U.S.A. Here Comes the CFL

The question is, is the United States ready for live football out of Saskatchewan?

When they're used to seeing the cameras pan over a Superdome in New Orleans, will they settle for a grain elevator in Regina? When the Roughriders play at Taylor Field, will there be an overhead shot from the Goodyear biplane? Is it too big a drop from Dallas Cowgirls to Prairie Plowgirls?

These and other exciting questions will be answered in the coming season as the Canadian Football League ventures once again into the megopolis of the American TV market. For $100,000 and future considerations, commissioner Jake Gaudaur has sold a 30-game package to a Pennsylvania firm called Total Communications Systems Ltd. Now he's sitting with fingers crossed, hoping TCS does something with it.

You see, Jake has been down this road before—several times. Cracking the U.S. TV market has been his pet project from the day he became commissioner.

He had a Wednesday night package going in 1973-4, but the birth of the World Football League killed that one. When the WFL died in turn it took a lot of account executives with it, leaving ad agencies reluctant to try the game again.

There was even a brief try at taping certain games and hustling the tapes around to interested cities. It fell through because a station would advertise the B.C.-Toronto game, and the tape wouldn't arrive. (That series also explained some of the strange calls we'd get from the deep south on Wednesdays, asking for the results of certain games. Somebody down there was trying to past post his friends with a few bob on the night's TV game from up there in Canada.

* * *

This time the league gets the 100 grand regardless, leaving TCS to put together a network from cable Pay-TV, straight cable, and microwave feeds to individual stations. Somewhere out there are millions of football fans who don't know what Leo Cahill is really like. Gaudaur is determined to give them the chance.

There is a space age flair to this one, a touch of Flash Gordon, with words like "earth stations" and "satellites" and "radio beam" bouncing around the committee rooms.

What it gets down to is that the business of bouncing signals off passing satellites has become so commonplace the cost of the hardware it involves has dropped to something within reason. A few years ago there were 50 earth stations capable of picking up the signal, and they cost $500,000 each. Now there are 270 at a cost of $25,000, and by the end of the year there will be 400.

Thus the league that once had trouble getting a train into Regina can now, if it wishes, beam live coverage from Taylor field, pick it up on receivers in New York and Buffalo, and send it along to stations wooed by TCS all over the U.S.

The money the CFL gets from this venture is minimal, and of secondary importance. The people the league is after for the moment are not TV fans but football players, most of whom think the CFL is a federal spy agency or a labor union.

They want to play at home where they can be seen. But if they see the games, check out the rules, become aware that some big name players have chosen the league over the NFL and made a fine living at it, and realize their friends and folks can still watch them play, they may be more receptive when the CFL scout comes calling.

For now, that's worth more than money.

There's been another change this time around. The U.S. network will take the Canadian picture and Canadian commentary, mercifully rescuing its customers from the wit and wisdom of Alex Karras.

* * *

Marty was partner to Ralph Kiner in Ral-Mar Sports Inc., the network buying the CFL package and trying desperately to sell it to 400 sponsors watching on a special screen at a lavish party in New York.

Marty was also the program director. Don Chevrier did the play-by-play, which was fine. Karras and Gerry Kramer handled the color, which was not.

This, in part, was Marty's evening:

When Marty screams for someone to go tell Alex he's holding the mike too far away, Gaudaur leaps from the truck like a gopher and conveys the message personally.

Within minutes, Marty is a wreck. Now he is trying to film the rodeo being staged at half time:

"Okay, pan in on the rodeo. Get me some horses, Bulls! Get me some bulls! Can't anyone get me a damn bull?"

When Marty tells someone in the booth to ask Karras to say hello to Hy Stearman in New York because he's one of the money men, Karras says "I understand there's a guy down there named Hy Spearman who's got a lot of money. I like to stay close to those guys."

In the truck, Marty has a stroke. "Phone New York!" he screams. "Tell them it was a joke! A joke!"

All night Karras calls Chevrier Ron. Chevvy points out that his name is Don.

"How come I keep calling you Ron?" Karras wonders aloud. "It's your other name I can't pronounce."

It was brutal. In that sense the WFL did football a great favor. It got Karras off the air.

Jay Does His Part

By The Associated Press

Jay Johnstone sits on the Philadelphia bench most of the time and waits for something to happen.

Something did happen Thursday night: Johnstone started in left field against Houston Astros in place of slumping Greg Luzinski. Hitting .154 going into the National League baseball contest, Johnstone got four hits in four trips to the plate, drove in a run and scored twice.

Oddly enough, however, when the Phillies finally beat the Astros 8-5 in the ninth inning, there he was on the bench again.

With the game tied 5-5, manager Danny Ozark lifted Johnstone for pinch-hitter Jose Cardenal who singled and wound up scoring in front of pinch-hitter Jerry Martin's ninth-inning, three-run homer.

"You have to go with the percentages," Johnstone said, "and Jose has been hitting the ball well. There have been times when Danny has left me in the game. In Chicago, against (Ramon) Hernandez, he left me in and I hit a home run. The next inning he pinch hit against Hernandez, so you never know."

In the only other games playe Thursday, Cincinnati Reds shaded Montreal Expos 3-2 and New York Mets beat Atlanta Braves 8-7.

In American League games, Mickey Rivers hit a tie-breaking triple as New York Yankees downed Cleveland Indians 5-3 and gave Ron Guidry his fifth win in five starts.

Mike Cubbage, Butch Wynegar and Jose Morales knocked in two runs apiece to lead Minnesota Twins to an 8-6 win over Kansas City Royals.

Sal Bando's eighth-inning sacrifice fly scored Paul Molitor as Milwaukee, after squandering a five-run lead, struck back and nipped Detroit Tigers 8-7.

Doug DeCinces drove in three runs with two homers and Pat Kelly hit a two-run double to pace Baltimore Orioles to a 5-3 win over Toronto Blue Jays.

TWO MORE PLAYERS SIGNED BY MUSSELS

Victoria Mussels, who make their debut in the Northwest Baseball League next month, have acquired two more players.

Lynn Chapman, the professional team's front-office manager, announced the signings Thursday of first-baseman Mark Hildebrand and pitcher Jeff McKay.

They join pitcher Frank Lucarelli, who was signed last week, and co-owners Jim Chapman, who will manage and play shortstop, and Don Rogelstad, who will coach and do some pitching.

Hildebrand, a 190-pound 22-year-old from Stendel, Ind., played in the Northwest League for Salem Senators last season and included 14 home runs in the hits which gave him a .281 average during 64 games.

McKay, 24, is a veteran of six seasons but has been hampered by injuries.

The right-hander started his career with Seattle of the Northwest League in 1972 and later played with Decatur in the Mid-West League, Fresno in the California League, Gray's Harbour in the Northwest League and Texas City in the Lone Star League.

Arm troubles which had plagued him seemed to end last season and he became a star reliever for Texas City, winning 11 and receiving credit for 10 saves while playing in 30 games.

Timbermen Learning Some of Sadder Facts

NEW WESTMINSTER — Nanaimo Timbermen, after a fine beginning, are finding out how the other half lives in the Western Lacrosse Association.

Winners of their first two games this season, the Timbermen now have dropped two in a row, the latest being a 16-13 loss to New Westminster Salmonbellies Thursday night.

This defeat was tough to take because the Timbermen had moved into a 4-0 lead in the first period and appeared to have matters under control. But the Salmonbellies, who earlier this year defeated Victoria Shamrocks for their first victory, rallied to tie the score 7-7 after two periods and then outscored the visitors 9-6 in the wide-open final period.

The brothers Tasker paced the Salmonbelly attack. Brian Tasker had three goals and four assists while Bob Tasker had one goal and six assists. Wayne Goss scored three goals for the Salmonbellies. Ken Brown, Eric Cowieson and Bill Mosdell each scored a pair. Ivan Tuura, Mario Govorchin and Norm Leuzler scored singles.

For Alexander the goals were his 18th, 19th, 20th and 21st of the season. No other player is close to him in this department.

Both teams had 22 minutes in penalties.

Nanaimo is at home to the Shamrocks on Saturday night and will visit Victoria next Wednesday.

Sneva Sizzles In Indy Practice

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Tom Sneva had a lap time of 203.1 miles an hour, the second fastest ever recorded at Indianapolis Motor Speedway, shortly before the close of Thursday's practice for the May 28 Indy 500 auto race.

Qualifying for last year's Indy 500, Sneva, the United States Auto Club's driving champion, drove a 200.535 m. p. h. to win the pole position. Records are not official unless recorded in a qualifying round, making Sneva's speed the standing record.

Sneva, 29-year-old former school teacher, became the seventh driver to top 200 m. p. h. here this year. The top speed is 1969 Indy winner Mario Andretti's 203.482, driven in practice before Andretti, a teammate of Sneva, went to Belgium to qualify for Sunday's Formula 1 Grand Prix race. Blacker the Fish — Better the Day for Fishing

HORSES DIE IN BLAZE

CINCINNATI (AP) — The second fire in five years at River Downs Race Track roared through three aged wood barns early this morning.

John Battaglia, general manager, said preliminary counts showed 10 to 14 horses perished. He said many of the horses ran back into the fire after they were freed by grooms and horsemen.

Four barns were destroyed by fire in 1973, killing a number of horses and crippling many others.

Since then, the track has built concrete stalls for 480 horses and more are scheduled.

"I've lost everything I have," said owner-trainer Gary Bradford. "What do I do? I lost seven horses that I know of, including two good stakes horses."

DOUG DAY RE-ELECTED

Derek Elcoat was elected vice-president and Tony Grover was voted back in as secretary-treasurer.

Bill Nixon Jr., Walter Craveiro and Lloyd Strickland, re-elected as directors, will be joined by newcomers Dave Unwin, Stan Turner and George Smith.

A deadline of June 30 has been set for all team applications to be in to Grover for the 1978-79 season.

FISH GETTING BIGGER BUT FEED DISAPPEARS OFF SOOKE

OUTDOORS

stewart lang

Salmon fishermen experienced a lull in action earlier this week around some spots on Vancouver Island — but the chinooks and blues that were caught are getting bigger.

The feed seemed to disappear off Sooke during the latter part of this week according to the fishermen who have sounders on their boats. And, at the same time, the catches of salmon tapered off.

Jimmy Chow boated the largest chinook in the area Saturday. He landed the 26¼-pounder fishing between Beechey Head and Secretary Island with strip.

The stretch of water between Bedford Island and the Trap Shack has produced best off Becher Bay with strip and minnow outfishing the artificial gear.

Dave Mills boated a 32½-pounder Monday fishing with strip off the Head and Bill Wishart caught a 30-pounder in the same spot Wednesday using minnow.

At Pedder Bay, Ray Goulet has started to catch chinooks on a Buzz-Bomb. He landed a 26-pounder while using one Sunday off Bentinck Island.

Dave Martin landed another 26-pounder Wednesday while trolling strip off Church Island and some good catches were taken on Needlefish in the vicinity of Christopher Point.

* * *

Off Pedder Bay, more chinooks in the 10 to 18-pound range are starting to show and most success was noted on 24 ounces of lead and 60 to 70 feet of line or deeper. Blues, jacks and the odd halibut have added a little variety to the catch.

Chain Flats turned hot Wednesday for fishermen working off Oak Bay. Most chinooks were in the seven to eight-pound class.

Fishermen at Sidney are landing chinooks to 25 pounds off Coal Island, to 21 pounds off Saanichton Spit and to 33½ pounds off James Island. Clare Anderson caught the latter fish Sunday with 10-pound test line, a light rod and Stingsilda.

But in Finlayson Arm, fishermen are connecting with chinooks to 21 pounds and a few blues are adding some variety.

* * *

Deep Bay waters are yielding a few coho and chinooks to 35 pounds have been landed between Rainy and Sunshine bays at the mouth of Alberni Inlet. A few blues are also showing in the latter vicinity.

Either they can travel north, where blues to three pounds are being landed between Kelsey Bay and Seymour Narrows.

* * *

Or, they can travel to the south, where numerous blues to four pounds are turning up around Mitlenatch and Savory islands.

A few chinooks to 31 pounds are coming in from various spots off Campbell River with hootchies the top-producing lure.

Trout anglers are picking up some good catches on large lake troll and worm or "frog" Flatfish in Quamichan and Cowichan lakes.

A small Kokanee spinner and worm produced four trout to seven pounds in Sproat Lake for one young angler in recent days and Great Central Lake has yielded some good trout around the Camp Nine area on bait and Flatfish.

* * *

NIBBLES: Chinook Club members of the Victoria-Saanich Inlet Anglers' Association will hold their monthly Sunburn Derby from dawn to 2 p.m. Sunday.

Barry Jenner took top prize Sunday in the VSIAA Membership Derby by boating a 21: 10-pounder off Bamberton . . . Following in order were: Frank Jenvey (12: 09), Ada Smith (12: 02), W. Grimshaw (10: 09) and Bruce Smith (10: 03) . . . Hidden weight winners were: Bill Bell, Ace MacPherson, Gerry MacPherson, Gary Vaughan, Steve Purych, Ray Smith, Gordie Chambers, Les Leacock, Marg Porter, Gary Goy, Barry Stokes, Ron Perks, Steve Miles, Mark Heine, Cathy Sadler, Den Heinekey, Jack Rowe, Leta Grimshaw, Elva Radtke, Hans Radtke, Win Rose and John Rose.

Get your group to agree on a project you can all support. Think it through. Will it create at least 3 new jobs? Will it use and improve the skills of unemployed people in your area? How much for salaries and other costs? Who will run the project on a day-to-day basis? Then go to your local Canada Manpower Centre/Canada Employment Centre or Job Creation Branch Office and pick up a Canada Works application and "Guide to Applicants." This application is not complicated, but please fill it out clearly and accurately.

If your idea is good, and your group has the will and expertise to see it through, Canada Works may be able to contribute to the necessary funding.

METROS BUY BUDD

TORONTO (CP) — Metros-Croatia of the North American Soccer League announced Thursday the purchasing Brian Budd, 26, from the expansion Colorado Caribous.

Budd, a Vancouver native, was a member of last year's Canadian team that advanced to within one round of the World Cup soccer tournament. He also won last year's Canadian superstars competition and the world superstars event held earlier this year in Freeport, Bahamas.

Fairburn Sets Pace

Fairburn finished up an easy winner in the elementary section of the 10th annual All-Schools Relays, which concluded Thursday at Centennial Stadium.

Fairburn finished with 154 points, 84 more than runner-up Doncaster and 97 more than third-place Gordon Head.

In the girls' division, Fairburn set the pace with 66 points while North Saanich was second with 34 and Doncaster third with 30. Fairburn also took the boys' title with 46 points, Sir James Douglas was second with 44 and Doncaster third at 28.

Three victories — in the 4×200 and 8×50 mixed relays and the girls' "B" 4×100 — helped the Fairburn cause.

Gordon Head won the "B" 8×50 relay, the combined St. Michael's-Norfolk House squad won the mixed 4×400, Willows won the girls' "B" 4×100 and the boys' "B" 4×100, North Saanich won the girls' "A" 4×100 and Harbour View won the boys' "A" 4×100.

Individual winners were Alex Steele Mortimer of Norfolk House in the girls' "A" 100 metres, Trevor McRae of Lakehill in the boys' "A" 100 and Linda Martin of North Saanich and Blair Hedley of Willows in the "B" 100 events.

WILLERS WINS HAMMER

ABILENE, Tex. (AP) — Harold Willers, a graduate of Claremont now attending Simon Fraser University in Burnaby, hurled the hammer 55.40 metres here Thursday night to win the first event of the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletes track and field championships.

Double by Holness Shatters Deadlock

Ernie Holness smashed a three-run double in the third inning to crack a 1-1 deadlock and propel Elks toward a 6-2 decision over league-leading Sooke Merchants in a Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League game Thursday at Central Park.

Jim Boyd led off the Elks' five-run third inning with a single, Bob Wheeler sacrificed, Mike Lee singled and Glen Wallis drew a walk to load the bases and set the stage for Holness, who later scored on a single by Rich Jones. Jim McHattie scored the remaining run in the inning on an error.

In the Victoria Senior Women's League, MacDonald's Furniture downed CJVI Vicettes 4-1 for their first loss of the season at Hyacinth Park.

Marilyn Bolton set the winning pace by pitching a three-hitter and hitting a two-run triple.

The game was scoreless until the fourth inning when Jan Nowell gained first on an error, Debbie James doubled, Marg Barber singled and, with two out, Noreen Rodriguez singled and Bolton tripled.

In the Heywood Men's League, Barry Moen cracked a three-run homer in the third inning and singled and scored in the sixth to lead Webb and Trace to a 5-3 decision over Remco Office Systems at Heywood Avenue Park.

IOC Ultimatum Handed to LA

ATHENS (AP) — "The ball is now in our part of the court," said Anton Calleia, personal assistant to the mayor of Los Angeles, the aspiring city for the 1984 Summer Olympic Games.

"Now we have the chance to work out an acceptable agreement that will give us the Olympic Games in our city in 1984. I am hopeful we shall be able to do that."

Calleia made it sound easy. But Los Angeles has some rethinking to do before July 31 to meet the requirements of the unyielding International Olympic Committee (IOC).

The IOC awarded the 1984 Games to Los Angeles provisionally on Thursday. The award will be withdrawn if by July 31 Los Angeles has not agreed to sign a contract, worded in the IOC's way and in line with its rules.

Mayor Tom Bradley has to persuade his city council to agree to a contract that honors the IOC rules, while protecting Los Angeles against financial loss.

If Los Angeles fails to meet the IOC's requirements by July 31, the IOC will look for a new host city for 1984 and probably will choose one at next year's session in Montevideo, Uruguay. If Los Angeles meets the IOC requirements, the IOC executive board has the authority to confirm the award of the Games.

Montreal, Munich, Mexico City and New York are reported ready to step in. But Killanin refused to discuss them, saying that was unfair to Los Angeles.

Meanwhile, the citizens of one place are happy. Sarajevo, the Yugoslav town where Archduke Ferdinand was assassinated and World War I was sparked in 1914, was given the 1984 Winter Games.

The IOC granted the Olympics to Yugoslavia for the first time. It rejected rival bids by Sapporo, the Japanese host city of 1972, and Sweden, which wanted to spread the Games around four areas.

Alberta Planning New Golf Course

EDMONTON (CP) — A $3-million golf course is being planned for the Kananaskis Country Park southwest of Calgary. It is expected to be completed by 1982.

Al Adair, minister of recreation, parks and wildlife, says the contract for design of the 18-hole course has gone to Robert Trent Jones, Inc.

How Your Garden Grows

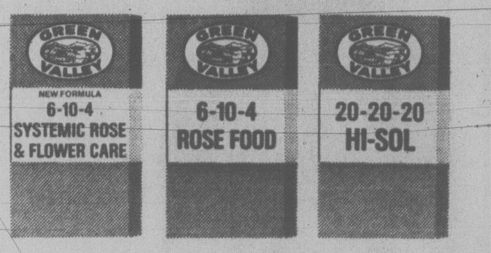
All about roses

Roses are very successfully grown in B.C., and once planted will produce attractive blooms for many years. The four main types are:

- Hybrid teas (large flowered bush type);
- Florabunda (smaller flowered and shrubby);
- Grandiflora (cross between hybrid tea and florabunda);
- Climbing (long canes with either large or small florets).

Roses require abundant sunshine, good air circulation and excellent soil drainage. Annual pruning is needed to shape plants and remove dead or weak shoots. Frequent spraying with a fungicide is also necessary to control mildew, rust and black spot, the common rose diseases.

Roses are heavy feeders, requiring large amounts of nitrogen, phosphorous and potash plus lesser amounts of calcium, magnesium and sulphur. They are susceptible to damage by aphids, white flies and various caterpillar type chewing insects. Weeding can also be a nuisance around the base of the thorny plants.



Green Valley Systemic Rose Food provides the nourishment roses need, while also controlling insects and weeds. Green Valley Rose Food does the same fertilizing job, but without the insecticide and weed killer. For supplementary feeding after the first flush of bloom, apply Green Valley Hi-Sol 20-20-20, a soluble fertilizer.

Roses respond best to soil that is near neutral in reaction. Green Valley Dolomite Lime will correct the predominantly acid condition found in this area. Green Valley Sulphate of Potash can be used throughout the season to improve bloom qualities and stem stiffness.

When planting new roses, Green Valley Starter Fertilizer 5-15-10 will provide the essential nutrients for healthy growth.

No. 1 in a series of lawn and garden hints.

AROUND OUR SHORES

Ken Beken of the world-known British marine photography family will arrive here on Wednesday from his home in Cowes on the Isle of Wight to take pictures of the Swiftsure classic that starts May 27 and the three-quarter ton world championships, to be raced here from May 30 to June 12.

The Beken tradition in marine photography began in 1890 with his grandfather, Frank, was handed down to his father Keith and is now ably carried on by Ken.

Having long been an admirer of the Beken yachting and Tall Ships calendars, it was a thrill for me to visit their unpretentious little shop when I was there to take in the Admiral's Cup and Cowes regatta.

All three Bekens have been awarded royal warrants for their marine photography — the grandfather by Queen Victoria, the others being awarded by King George V and the Duke of Edinburgh.

Ken has been invited here by our own Jim McVie, who has built up a pretty good reputation of his own through his marine shots, which most local sailors believe equal Beken pictures in their excellence.

It's a pretty safe bet that the next Beken calendar will have at least one Swiftsure shot on it. We can also expect to see at least one of the Tall Ships race from Hawaii to Victoria because Ken will be in Hawaii to get shots of the start.

Our old friends Jack and Gene Becker of Portland pulled off a big one this week by winning the new 275-mile race from Portland to Victoria. Their C and C 30 Pegasus was the first in the Pacific Handicap Racing Fleet section. As in past years, after competing in Swiftsure, the Beckers will keep Pegasus around our waters for some time in order to get in some cruising and fishing.

The first of the International Offshore Rule boats in the race was Jim Jorden's Morgan 36 Aggression. He and his seven crew are all architects. Jim entered the race by losing a game of poker — his crew insisting that he register as the penalty for losing.

* * *

Three more sailouts took place this week in the Royal Victoria Yacht Club's match-racing series. Rick McBride beat out his dad, Rod, by 2 minutes 10 seconds in Thunderbirds, Greg Oliver beat out Dave Richardson by 8 seconds in Solings, and Nick Thornton led John Ciceri by 3 minutes in Thunderbirds.

The club has cancelled next Wednesday's series racing so that skippers and crews can get their boats ready for Swiftsure and Juan de Fuca.

The top Laser sailors on Wednesday were Kasper Schibli, Kim Hellwig and Dave Teece. In X-class dinghies it was Dave Richardson, followed by Doug Gray. Ed Life's Semiramis won in Cal 20s. The first three PHRF boats were Ted Trenholme's Impatience, Jan Olsen's Discretion and Rod Andrews and Rick Parkinson's Soling Piute Logic, who beat out her sister ship, Soren Isbrand's Danish Pastry by 2 seconds.

The first three Thunderbirds were Bob Grundison's Owl, Larry Shorter's Kila-Kila and John Watson's Drambuie. Garry Cooney, who launched his new boat, Hocus, last week finished in seventh spot.

Father-Son Duel Marks Preakness

BALTIMORE (AP) — "Working under my father was like going to Harvard," says Albert Barrera, a college dropout turned horse trainer who will take on dad Laz and favored Affirmed in Saturday's Preakness with an outsider named Track Reward.

The Preakness is considered to be another duel between Affirmed and Alydar. But it has a fresh touch in that it will be the first stakes meeting between the two Barreras.

"I will invite my father into the winner's circle with me," said 24-year-old Albert with a broad smile before entering Track Reward Thursday for the 1 3-16 mile, $150,000-added Preakness at Pimlico.

However, the Barrera most likely to do the inviting is 53-year-old Laz, a two-time trainer of the year who will be shooting for his 20th stakes victory of 1978 in the Preakness.

Affirmed, who has beaten Alydar in five of seven meetings including a 1½-length victory in the Kentucky Derby, was made the early even-money favorite, with Alydar second at 7-5. The third choice, at 3-1, was Believe It, who was third in the Derby and is the only other Derby starter in the field.

Track Reward, owned by Aisquith Stable and ridden by Bernie Gonzalez, did not race last year and has won three of eight starts in 1978. Last Sunday, he finished fifth in the one-mile Withers at Aqueduct.

Albert Barrera began going to the track with his father when he was three and worked for him summers while in high school and during three years at the University of Miami, Fla.

He was majoring in languages with a minor in psychology at Miami, but the race track was thick in his blood.

"He was not doing so good so I went down to see him," said Laz. "There were Racing Forms all over his room. I said, "You read the Racing Form and I read the Racing Form, so you come with me and we'll both read the same one."

"I had some books," said Albert, smiling.

"What I'm doing now I love," added Albert, who has been training on his own and has a stable of about 20 horses. "I wouldn't change it for anything. The foundation I have he (his father) gave me. That was the best college I could have had.

"I think my father devotes 99 per cent of his time to his horses. He doesn't like to pass up anything. He likes to keep watch on everything . . . including me."

After loading the bases, Gorge scored two runs on two sacrifice flies. Mike Laffins then cracked out a double to knock in the winning run.

Golfers Getting Better, Player Chides Nicklaus

But, for one day, their results were the same.

Nicklaus is performing in only his eighth tour tournament of 1978. Player, meanwhile, has elected to play 10 consecutive weeks.

The sport's two superstars solved the water-logged Muirfield Village layout—the $8-million course Nicklaus designed and built—for five-under-par 67s and a tie for the lead after Thursday's opening round.

Five straight rainy days forced officials to let the select international field of 105 use preferred fairway lies forthe third time this year.

It may have been the reason for a tournament record of 27 sub-par scores for a round. Nicklaus and Player were at odds over that.

"When the fellas get their hands on the golf ball and tee it up," said Nicklaus, "you're going to have good scores."

Player scoffed at the notion.

"I don't think it made any difference. The players are just getting better, my friend."

Non-winner Rex Caldwell, last with 315 here in 1977, fashioned a 68 this time, one shot off the pace, and tied with Tom Kite and Jim Simons.

Thirteen players were bunched three strokes apart. Ed Sneed, Lon Hinkle and Curtis Strange had 69s. Bobby Wedkins, Mike Morley, Mark Hayes, Andy North and Alan Tapis were at 70 going into today's second round.

Tom Weiskopf matched it, but Tom Watson struggled to a fat 40 on the back side, including two consecutive double bogeys, for 73. Hale Irwin also took a 73. Arnold Palmer had a 77.

CFL Rejects Share Plan

VANCOUVER (CP) — A revised gate equalization formula was rejected Thursday by the Canadian Football League at its semi- annual meeting.

The Select Committee On Revenue Sharing (SCORE), established last year, presented a resolution to the meeting which would have provided for clubs with gate receipts higher than the league average paying more into the equalization fund.

The resolution, which needed unanimous support to pass, was voted down 7 to 2 by representatives of the nine CFL clubs.

Commissioner Jake Gaudaur said the resolution was the most important item on the meeting's agenda, and "I'm disappointed we have been unable to reach a conclusion."

Gaudaur said the club representatives were unanimous in deciding that the SCORE committee should continue to work on the matter and to present a report to a full executive meeting Sept. 15.

"We know what we have to overcome now," he said.

Gauduar said that besides changing the gate equalization, the new formula would have provided for heavy penalties against clubs which paid excessive player salaries.

Gaudaur said he did not think the failure of the resolution would result in a critical fiscal position for any club, although he hoped a new equalization formula would be in place by 1979.

"If we hadn't established our present equalization formula eight or nine years ago, I don't think the league would be in as good a shape as it is," he said.

Earlier, the league awarded the 1979 Grey Cup to Montreal, after getting assurance from Olympic Stadium representative Guy Savard that a cover for the entire field would be provided.

The 1978 game will be held in Toronto at CNE stadium, and the league Thursday set ticket prices at $12-$24—the same as last year.

A Contrast in Styles

By BERNADINE MORRIS
New York Times

NEW YORK — In one corner, Perry Ellis, Rising star. Golden boy of the fashion world at the moment. Purveyor of a new kind of rugged look that should appeal to the college generation as it sheds its blue jeans.

In the other corner, Bill Blass. Establishment Star. Favorite designer of bankers' wives and social leaders from New York to California. Designer of clothes that make women feel comfortably dressed, in tailored suits to glittering evening fare.

For Ellis, it was a celebration. It was only his fourth fashion show, but even before it started, Larry Leeds, the chairman of Manhattan Industries, which owns Portfolio, the company for which Ellis works, announced that he would soon have his own showroom and design studio.

Didier Grumbach thought so, too. Grumbach manufactures ready-to-wear in Paris and was considering adding Ellis's styles to his roster.

"He has a very different look," Grumbach said.

The different look was heralded by a team of cheerleaders — Ellis imported the Princeton squad for authenticity — who set the tone for his show in their white knitted pullovers and black pleated skirts. Variations of their outfit were to appear later on the models.

The clothes themselves are in fabrics that look nubby and homespun — but watch carefully. That simple nubby tweed may turn out to be silk. It is reminiscent of an earlier generation of college girls, who collected sweaters in cashmere and skirts in Scottish plaids.

Of course, it is not just a rerun of twin sweater sets and kilts. A lot has happened to colleges and people since the rah-rah days — and the Ellis clothes reflect the change.

They look absolutely comfortable and relaxed — to the point where a knitted glove instead of a handkerchief is thrust into the breast pocket of jacket. The clothes hardly look store-bought, but rather as if they were borrowed from an older brother or a boyfriend. They're new clothes that look lived-in before they're out of the store.

Colors are muted, but textures are full of contrasts: hopsacking jackets with corduroy skirts, for instance. Instead of boots, legs are clad in long johns, baggy crew socks and men's oxfords.

Now for the shapes. Shoulders are padded, which accounted for the appearance of a football hero in full regalia alongside one of the cheerleaders. Ellis said he had no compunctions about adding padded coat to padded jacket to padded sweater.

The sweaters have their own appeal. A waist-length pullover in thick yarn, the natural color of the wool as it comes from the sheep, is probably the winner of the collection. But there are also little shrugs that are just sleeves and a back (more comfortable to handle than a shawl) and cocoon-shaped sweaters pulled in with a drawstring well below the hips. Puffy down-filled jackets, battle jackets lined with fur and jackets of fluffy long-haired furs such as feathered coyote are what Ellis suggests to take the place of the raccoon coat of yore.

The Blass show was a spectacular in its own right. Standees included Nan Kempner, perennial on best-dressed lists, and Geraldine Stutz, president of Bendel's. Irene Galitzine, the Italian designer, managed to get to her front-row seat through the throng at the Hotel Pierre's Cotilion Room. She said he was glad she did.

"It's the first fashion show I've seen since I went into business 20 years ago," she said. "I adore it."

So did everybody else. It was throughout the work of a professional who understands the mood of the moment and how to plug into it. He started with evening clothes because, he said, his fans seem to go to lots of parties. Then he swung into daytime styles, which he does as well as anybody and better than most.

An expert at tailoring, he makes jackets that are as supple as butter. An overcoat, complete with epaulets, is pared down to eliminate extraneous detail. Though it's related to the movement to Army clothes, it becomes a genre unto itself.

Herbert Kasper occupies a place somewhat in between these two blockbusters. His clothes are simple, civilized and have undergone a change since his last collection.

"The era of overblown clothes is over," he announced at his breakfast showing at the Pierre, which got the day's activities started.

Class Reunion Stretches Back to 1917

elizabeth forbes

The time? Tomorrow afternoon from 2 to 5.

The place? George Gardiner Hall, next to Oak Bay United Church on Granite Street.

The occasion? A reunion of Willows Elementary School pupils, grades 3 to 5, taught by Miss Margaret Dunn (now Mrs. Harold Beckwith) in the years 1917 to 1922.

It's to be a come-and-go party. A drop-in or stay-for-the-afternoon affair.

Invitations went out to over 200 men and women and it is expected that at least 100 will attend, with their husbands or wives, from up-Island, the Lower Mainland, the Interior and from California as well as the Victoria area.

Class pictures, records and snapshots of various events and copies of official class registers have been arranged around the walls of the hall.

Mrs. Beckwith will be there to greet and to reminisce with her former pupils.

Tea will be served and it is expected that the words "remember when" will be repeated over and over during the afternoon.

The idea for this get-together surfaced some months ago when Margaret Beckwith, visiting at Mill Bay, renewed acquaintence with former pupil Harold Whitfield, who lives there.

Soon after that, a small committee was formed (Whitfield, Janet Smart, Jessie Buckler Newton, Andrew Pitkethley and Mrs. Beckwith) to plan the event.

Names of pupils were found in the school board office where old school registers have been microfilmed and stored.

The place and time was decided and the invitations sent out. A quick return of affirmative replies, many with pictures or stories of those long-ago class years, soon attested to popularity of the idea.

Willows School did not look as it does today when Mrs. Beckwith joined thr staff in 1917.

Her room was in a small building, divided into three sections. And, although classes were co-educational, the boys' entrance was at one end and girls' at the other.

In front and a little to the side of that building was an old farmhouse where the school originated. By then it had an attached annex and both it and the farmhouse were still being used for classes.

Not far away, on the other side of Cadboro Bay Road, were barns and stables of the Willows fairgrounds and Mrs. Beckwith remembers "the smell of manure and animals and the flies that often floated over school property."

Five teachers — all women — made up the school staff. Mrs. Rhodes, the principal, Marjorie McGillivrary, Alexia Brown, Beatrice (Birdie) Cook and Margaret Dunn.

It was First World War years so victory gardens played a big part in the school program.

Each pupil was allotted space and learned something of agriculture "through growing vegetables and some flowers."

Interest in those gardens was so high "boys and girls went back to care for them on weekends and during holidays."

Strict attention was given to reading, writing and arithmetic.

Nature studies were conducted on walks through wooded areas near the school and along Willows beach.

Leaves were gathered, pressed in scrapbooks and their differences recorded. Shells and tiny sea creatures were taken as specimens and for discussion.

The Christmas concert was a big event and teachers spent long hours arranging skits, songs and recitations for those yearly affairs.

The ceremony took place in St Barnabas Church and among invited guests were boys and girls of her 1922 class — the last she taught in Willows School.

As a parting gift, the young teacher used her camera to take a picture of that class and then had a copy made for each one of the pupils.

Some of those old-time snapshots have been returned with acceptances of invitations and a large blow-up of the photograph has been made and placed among other mementoes in the George Gardiner Hall.

Mrs. Beckwith didn't teach again until many years later, after her own son, John, and daughters Jean (Mrs. Geoff Vantreight) and Sheila (Mrs. Cecil Gould) were grown, married and with families of their own.

Then she taught night school classes in English for new Canadians.

MARGARET BECKWITH

'Buzz' Words Explained

By LYNNE GORDON

caveat emptor

Every business, every profession, every new movement usually develops its own descriptive language, its own "buzz" words that are only understood by the inner circle.

Strangely enough the same thing is happening in the consumer field. The stronger the movement becomes, the more colorful its language. Words or phrases like bait and switch, con man, fly-by-night operator, the high-ball, the low-ball, the step-up, graphically described many of the tricks and phony pitchers used in today's marketplace.

THE CON MAN

First, let me remind you that the con man, the hustler or the fly-by-night operator may have changed his image over the years but his techniques are almost the same as they were in the days of the medicine men and snake oil pedlars. Perhaps he doesn't look as flashy, doesn't sport the flashy diamond ring or roll a fat cigar. Usually, not always, he's more conservatively dressed, more soft-spoken.

But the con man stll thinks of you (the victim) in such unflattering terms as the mooch, the mark, the tip. If he has a deal for you that sounds too good to be true, you better believe it probably is. I'll wager my bottom dollar that there's always a real hook, if you also get into something, without careful comparison shopping, because you are offered a "free" gift.

BAIT AND SWITCH

This technique is used by many hustlers as well as "legitimate businessmen.

Let me tell you how to recognize this shady technique.

First, you'll read, see or hear an advertisement about a fantastic buy of some product or service, for an unbelievably low price. You might even get a flyer slipped into you mailbox or under your door. The unbelievable bargain can relate to a number of areas, such as carpets, freezers, appliances, television repairs, swimming pools, home improvements, driveway paving. The list is endless, but the technique is the same.

It sounds good to you and in all good faith you go to the store or allow a hot-shot salesman into your home. Now that's the bait — the low price. It's easy to recognize the bait?

Try to buy the product or service at the advertised low price. In the trade they say "it's nailed to the floor." The salesman never intended to sell it. But once he has you in the store, or he gets in your home, he will pressure you to "switch" to higher-priced merchandise. He'll give you all the corny reasons for not being able to buy the low-priced product. Such as: "We are all out of stock." "It doesn't come in the size, quantity or colors you want." "This merchandise is too shoddy for someone like you, you have better taste."

Once you recognize this unscrupulous pitch, walk out. The salesman has a bundle of other tricks he can use.

THE LOW-BALL

The low-ball can be used when someone wants to sell you a service or product and gives you an unrealistic, low estimate to get your business.

But once they have you on the hook, they will sting you with a higher price. This can happen in such areas as moving, buying a car or car repairs. The most important thing is never accept any estimates or low price until you have comparison shopped. Then, before you sign, make sure it's written into the contract.

In reverse the high-ball can happen when someone, let's say a car dealer, can offer you a high price for your trade-in. Then, at the time of delivery when he has you all psyched for your deal, he will reappraise the price he gave you for the trade-in and offer a lower price. He is allowed to do this if the contract contains that option.

FLY-BY-NIGHT OPERATOR

These sharks are called fly-by-night because that is exactly what they usually do, fly by night with your money.

Watch out for the door-to-door salesman or itinerant seller who shows up in your neighborhood and promises to deliver something in the future. All he wants is a deposit. After collecing hundreds of small deposits, he disappears.

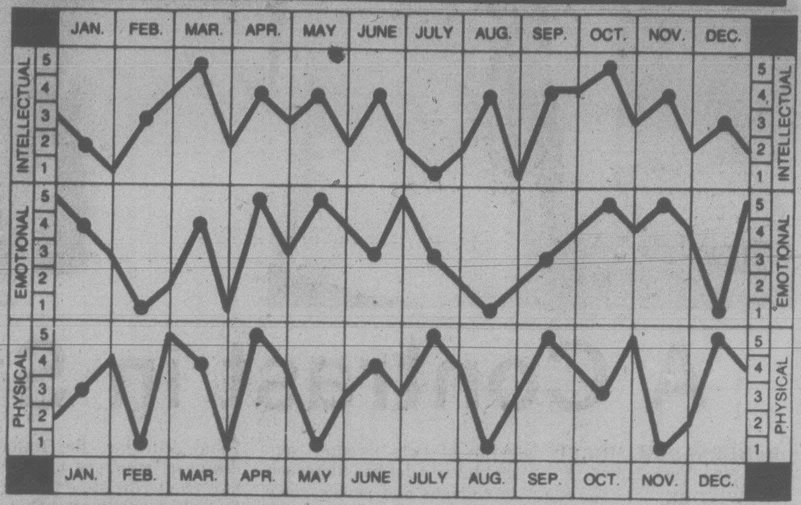
Bio-dex

By Ken J. Michaels

Your computerized biorhythm

© Copyright 1977

Dist. by Toronto Sun Syndicate



HOW TO USE YOUR CHART:

Locate your month of birth. The dots on each graph highlight your biorhythm readouts. Check the scales on the left or right for your Intellectual, Emotional and Physical factors, from 1 to 5. Add these three numbers to obtain your Bio-dex. The Bio-dex is computed on average population age based on official Government statistics.

BIO-DEX READOUT:

0-5 Negative Cycle-	Avoid ladders and steep slopes. Your balance is disturbed at this low part of your cycle.
6-10 Neutral Cycle-	Seize your opportunity, but try to avoid heavy financial commitment until your levels improve.
11-15 Positive Cycle-	Your thoughts on love are well founded. Speak out while the going's good!

Our emotional Bio-dex ups and downs are always exaggerated when under a lot of pressure. Big cities and fast paced work environments highlight our happy peaks, but also drive us to deep depression on "critical" days. Try to escape now and again — to the country, sea or lakeshore. A short break can help those dangerous emotional lows, and sometimes we really cannot cope with life unless we have a well-earned respite from unnatural pressure.

Nursery Rhymes Help Children Learn French

TORONTO (CP) — English-speaking youngsters across Canada are chorusing along in excellent French with records of familiar nursery rhymes.

The man singing and talking on the records is not only bilingual, he's a singer, an actor, a producer, a Second World War fighter pilot, and an inventor. He is Quebec-born Jean Cavall, whose special crusade for seven years has been teaching familiar nursery rhymes and children's songs in French to English-speaking children.

"I had this idea the best and most painless way to teach young children French with proper pronunciation would be through the rhymes they had heard at their mother's knee," said Cavall, who now lives here.

"Nursery rhymes are an English-speaking tradition, going back hundreds of years. Strangely, there have been no French nursery rhymes."

He said that nursery rhymes such as Three Blind Mice and Humpty Dumpty were minted by the English to parody their French conquerors at the time of William I.

"They have never been properly translated into French. I was fortunate enough to have a French-speaking mother and an English-speaking father, so grew up in both languages. I felt good translations done with the skill of a performer would work," he said.

The Canadian Parents for French spread word of Cavall's venture across the country, and hundreds of albums have been bought by school boards and families.

Cavall works in many Canadian television shows and wants to establish an open-air theatre and school of fine arts on Prince Edward Island.

STICKY ANSWER

"The peanut oil will break up the gum," says Robinson, 32, who runs a salon strictly for kids called Haircuts for Peanuts.

"Comb it out after the gum has softened, and then wash the hair," is the advice of this expert.

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: If a man is married to a woman who is "cold" or always "too tired" to satisfy her husband's physical needs, he gets a lot of sympathy. And if he should go elsewhere for what he's missing at home, no one blames him. But how about a woman? She can be love-starved for years, and if she as much as looks at another man, she's considered a tramp.

Well, I'm no tramp, Abby. I'm a decent, normal woman who has been married for 16 years to a man who has given me a fine home, children, financial security and companionship. But for the last four years his interest in sex has diminished to nothing.

We are both in our early 40s, and I think we are much too young to consider the physical side of our marriage finished. (Or am I wrong?) I've tried everything to revive his interest in me, but it's hopeless. He refuses to discuss it, and he won't see a doctor. Meanwhile, I'm left frustrated.

I've never been unfaithful in my life. I'm attractive, look younger than my years, and lately I have been wondering if perhaps an affair on the side would save my husband's face and our marriage. Or am I rationalizing? Woman to woman, Abby, what do you think?

DESPERATE

DEAR ABBY: Woman to woman, I think you should tell your husband that if he values his marriage he had better see a doctor for a thorough checkup. He could have a physical disorder.

If it's not "physical," it's psychological, in which case therapeutic counseling might help. It is not normal for a man his age to have lost all interest in sex.

DEAR ABBY: You told BUGGED, whose ex-in-laws made a habit of visiting her and her new husband's home every Sunday in order to see the grandchildren, that a once-a-week visit didn't seem excessive to you.

Abby, you are wrong, wrong, wrong!

Visiting every Sunday IS excessive. Once every two months would seem more reasonable to me. Also, why should the ex-in-laws go to their former daughter-in-law's home regularly? If they want to keep up the contact with their son's children, why don't they pick them up and take them to a park, a ballgame or to their home and entertain them? And why must it be on a Sunday?

Please reconsider, Abby. That answer didn't sound like you. Are you on a vacation or what?

DISAPPOINTED

DEAR DISAPPOINTED: I never go on vacation. That answer was mine and I'll take my lumps for it. You are right. I goofed and several hundred readers wrote to tell me so.

DEAR ABBY: Our problem is company who don't know when it's time to go home. When we have people over and they say, "Well, I think we'd better be going now," just to be polite we say something like, "Oh, you don't have to go yet," or "Stay a little while longer." So they stay. And it's another hour before they make a move to go home.

Abby, please tell your readers that when a host and hostess say, "You don't have to go home yet," they are just being polite and shouldn't be taken seriously. Why are some people so dumb?

DEAD TIRED

DEAR TIRED: Which people? There would be no problem if hosts and hostesses would not encourage their guests to overstay their welcome with insincere coaxing.

DEAR ABBY: I have a problem that concerns not only me, but all the other kids who ride my school bus. It's our bus driver (she's a woman). First of all, she drives a little too fast and second, when she has to put on her brakes because the car in front puts on his brakes, she waits until she is only about a foot away from the car.

How can I tell her she does these things without hurting her feelings? She is really a very nice lady. I am surprised we haven't had an accident yet, but some of the kids have black and blue marks all over from when she slammed on her brakes and everybody went flying. Thank you.

SIGN ME "SCARED"

DEAR SCARED: First, tell the woman bus driver what you've told me. If that doesn't slow her up, tell your mother.

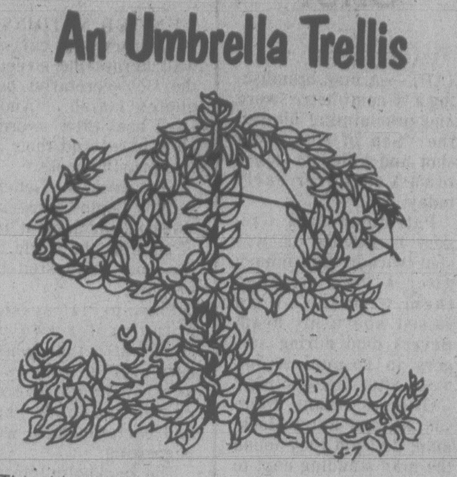
THE MOTHER EARTH NEWS®
. . . it tells you how
An Umbrella Trellis



This idea may carry recycling to its extreme, but...

If you have a discarded umbrella hiding someplace in a closet, why not "plant" it in your flower garden as a support for climbing vines? Simply remove the cloth from the frame and run a wire through the tip of each rib (wrapping it around each point once to hold the arches stationary and equally spaced apart). Then insert the handle in the ground with some climbing plant growing beneath it.

For your copy of MOTHER's reprint No. 53, "Pest Control," send 25 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to The Mother Earth News®, in care of this newspaper, Box 4994, Des Moines, Iowa 50306.

Check hinges and temples on eyeglasses and sunglasses before you buy them. The longest-lasting frames will have wire inside plastic temples and there'll be three or four holes for each hinge screw. These better frames can be refitted with new temples should one eventually break. Optical centers usually have lots of temples to match up with yours.

Could you pick out your bike from the hundreds recovered by the police department every year? It would help if you took a colored photo of your bike, kept a record of the serial number, model number, etc., and wrote down a description of any accessories that can't be easily removed.

You may not be able to tell when your radial tires are under-inflated unless you check them with a good tire gauge. It's worth the time when you know that a badly under-inflated tire can build up enough heat to cause a blowout. Think, too, of all the gas mileage you're losing with under-inflated tires. Check tire pressure about every 500 miles and that spare tire once a month.

The way a handle is fastened to the blade often indicates the quality of a kitchen knife. A blade that extends only a short way into the handle and is held in place with a metal collar will not wear well. The blade should be fastened with two or three rivets, in the handle. High carbon steel and some chromium-plated high carbon steel knives will rust if left to dry. Dry them with a dish towel.

★ ★ ★

Most clogged sinks get that way because liquid fats in dishwater solidify on cooler pipes and build up a grease film. Then coffee grounds and bits of food cling to the film until the water won't drain away fast enough. Pouring boiling hot water down the sink once every day or so helps keep the water draining. Adding a little household ammonia or vinegar helps, too.

★ ★ ★

Buy bare-root trees and shrubs and you should plant them right away so the roots won't dry out completely. Don't fertilize them at planting time; they don't need anything to eat while they are deciding to live or die. When you see leaves sprouting then you know the root system is forming to support top growth. Then fertilize.

My 12-year-old daughter constantly pulls out her hair. Sometimes she even takes out her eyelashes. We're going out of our minds trying to get her to stop, but we're getting nowhere. — Mrs. T.C.E.

Dear Mrs. E.:

The reason that you're "getting nowhere" is that you are devoting yourselves to the end result, rather than to the basis of an obvious psychological compulsion.

The condition you describe is known as "tricho-tillomania" and is one that has long been recognized as a sign of some psychological disturbance. Most children with this problem often show many other evidences of psychological stress.

It is most important that you concentrate on learning the basis for her problem, rather than using punishment or nagging to break the hair-pulling cycle.

Psychological testing can often reveal a particular area responsible for this condition. When these tests are interpreted, both you and your child can be given direction and greater insight into the emotional conflicts that may be present.

I've often told readers that the need for psychological testing and treatment is no shame or stigma. You certainly would not hesitate for a moment getting an X-ray of your daughter's foot if there were the slightest indication of a fracture. Consider this a fracture of the psyche. It deserves the same degree of patience, understanding and treatment. Almost always, when the underlying tension difficulty is located and handled, the hair-pulling habit disappears.

I'm planning to marry my second cousin. Even though I have assurance that we're not heading for trouble when we have a family, I'm still getting pressured by some people that marrying a cousin is a risky business. — Mr. C.U.

Dear Mr.U.:

An excellent scientific study showed that 95 per cent of all children born of a first-cousin marriage were perfectly normal. Certainly, the chances of abnormalities of a second-cousin marriage should be distinctly less.

I do not believe that it is the right of anyone to impose on you the hardship of an emotional burden by suggesting that you are "heading for trouble."

There are many doctors at universities, medical schools and hospitals who specialize in genetic counselling. After obtaining highly detailed family histories, and then studying the blood with complex electronic microscopic devices, an excellent picture can be portrayed of the safety of a first or second-cousin marriage.

I believe that before long genetic blood studies will eventually be part of the same program as premarital testing for syphilis. Such a program might reduce the frequency of birth abnormalities, and the heartache associated with them.

Dominican Election Counting Resumes

SANTO DOMINGO (AP) — The counting of votes resumed in the Dominican presidential election, and Antonio Guzman's Dominican Revolutionary (PRD) party said it would fight if President Joaquin Balaguer was proclaimed the winner.

Balaguer said in a televised speech Thursday night he would hand over his office if one of his seven opponents in the presidential election Tuesday was declared the winner by the Central Electoral Board.

"What matter the destiny of a political party or my name before the destiny of five million Dominican citizens," said the 70-year-old president, trailing Guzman by more than 100,000 votes when the national police suspended the vote count early Wednesday. "As president of the republic and of the Reform party I want to exhort my compatriots to accept calmly the decision of the Electoral Board."

Earlier Thursday his party said Balaguer, seeking his fourth four-year term, won re-election by a margin of 180,000 votes.

Guzman's running mate, vice-presidential candidate Jacobo Majluta, said the PRD would oppose "force with force" if its "victory" was threatened.

"We will not tolerate force being imposed over right," he said. "We will oppose force with force. We are going to fight to defend the rights of the Dominican people."

The vote count resumed at noon Thursday, but electoral board president Manuel Joaquin Castillo told reporters it may be two weeks before the final results are known. He would not say why.

When the national police intervened, a fourth of the estimated 2.2 million votes had been counted and Guzman, a 67-year-old landowner and businessman, led Balaguer 326,027 votes to 218,073.

Rumors of a coup persisted despite statements by the military that it would respect the constitution. Police and troops patrolled the country, and businesses and government offices in Santo Domingo were closed.

6 New Cities On West Bank

TEL AVIV (AP) — Six new cities plus satellite towns capable of housing 56,000 Jewish families will go up in the occupied West Bank under a settlement plan presented to an Israeli cabinet committee, Israeli radio reported Thursday.

The radio said the plan, like others drawn up for Jewish settlement in the West Bank of the Jordan River, is far from implementation because of diplomatic difficulties.

The United States strongly opposes Jewish settlement in the West Bank, where between 500,000 and one million Palestinian Arabs have lived under Israeli military government since Israel occupied the area in the 1967 Middle East war.

The newest program set before the committee on settlements was reported to have been drawn up by Maj.-Gen. Avraham Tamir, chief of army planning, based on strategic concepts of Ezer Weizman, the Israeli defence minister. No timetable is set.

'Son Of God' Shot

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — A man brandishing a 76-centimetre sword and proclaiming himself the "Son of God" was shot and killed in downtown Vancouver early today.

Patrolmen said Gregory L. Bevers, 18, was shot twice in the stomach after a man attacked them with the sword raised above his head. Bevers died during surgery in hospital 90 minutes after the shooting.

Officers Danne Johnson, 30, and Larry Heckman, 27, said they found the man standing next to a broken display window at Main Street Loan Co. in the downtown business district. He was holding the sword in his hand.

In his belt, police said, he carried another sword of similar length, a 40.6-centimetre dagger and a 22.9-centimetre bayonet.

The policemen said they tried to talk the suspect into surrendering, but he proclaimed himself the "Son of God" and moved toward their patrol car. He chopped off the beacon unit from atop the car and the radar unit on the rear of the vehicle.

Police arriving Wednesday night at Corpus Christi Cathedral arrested the man, who refused to give his name and carried no identification. They said he was swinging from a crucifix suspended in the 30-foot-high marble altar.

UN Calls Special Session To Plea for Disarmament

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — An inscription carved on a wall across the street from the UN secretariat building quotes Isaiah: "And they shall beat their swords into plowshares and their spears into pruning hooks."

Next week, the General Assembly begins a special session on disarmament in hopes of pointing the world toward the goal suggested by the prophet.

The special session, in planning for two years, comes at a time when concern over such things as the neutron bomb, the cruise missile and exotic chemical and bacteriological weapons is growing.

The Stockholm International Peace Research Institute estimates that current world military spending totals $400 billion annually and predicts that the outlay will rise to $1 trillion by the end of the century.

By various estimates, the U.S. and the Soviet Union account for well over one-half of all military spending and, as arms merchants, they are responsible for almost three-quarters of sales. The U.S. accounts for 38 per cent of sales and the Soviet Union 34 per cent. Britain and France have about nine per cent each.

The institute says more than 50 per cent of all these arms imports go to the volatile Middle East.

A document prepared by a multi-national UN study group in preparation for the special session says the armaments industry and the world's military machines consume vast quantities of capital, resources and manpower each year.

It says the world's economies would grow by an additional one or two percentage points annually if military spending were channelled into civilian pursuits.

It also puts the picture into starkly human terms, saying that the 1974 World Food Conference estimated that global agricultural development needs are $1 billion to $2 billion behind annual requirements.

"To close this gap, funds equivalent to one per cent of the military budgets of the industrialized countries would be sufficient."

It notes that the World Health Organization's campaign to eradicate smallpox cost $83 million — barely enough for a single modern strategic bomber — and that a similar effort to eliminate malaria, estimated to cost $450 million, is faltering because of lack of funds.

War machines also require quantities of natural resources. Experts estimate that military uses account for 3.5 per cent of the world's annual petroleum consumption, or about the same amount as is consumed by Africa.

The UN study estimates that 60 million people are engaged in military-related occupations, equivalent to about 70 per cent of the U.S. labor force.

The General Assembly has long been a forum for discussion of disarmament, although most actual arms control agreements have been worked out by bodies such as the Conference of the Committee on Disarmament of which Canada is a member.

Such bodies have links with the UN, although they have no formal ties and have succeeded in reaching several agreements. They include the nuclear non-proliferation treaty of 1968, the seabed treaty of 1971, prohibiting the emplacement of nuclear weapons on the ocean floor, and the bacteriological weapons convention of 1972.

Italy's New Abortion Law Branded Murder by Vatican

URANIUM LOSS 'BOOKKEEPING'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The latest tally shows another 25.1 pounds of weapons-grade uranium — enough for a bomb — missing from a Pennsylvania plant, but government officials say sloppy bookkeeping rather than theft appears to be the cause.

Counting the new discrepancy, the plant has lost track of 437.6 pounds of uranium since 1968.

Past losses triggered speculation, never proven, that bomb-grade material might have been slipped from the plant and sent to Israel.

A spokesman for the Nuclear Regulatory Commission said the latest shortage was discovered during inventories of uranium handled in the year that ended Sept. 30, 1977, at the Apollo, Pa., plant operated by Babcock and Wilcox Co.

NRC officials, blaming the new discrepancies primarily on accounting procedures that have been changed, said they do not plan any further investigation because the plant is scheduled to close this summer. They said they do not believe any of the 25.1 pounds of uranium actually was taken from the plant.

The plant, which makes nuclear submarine fuel elements, had the highest loses of any uranium processing facility in the country.

The CIA has speculated that previous losses might reflect secret, illegal diversion of uranium to Israel, where it could have been used to produce atomic weapons.

ROME (Reuter) — Roman Catholic Italy has been given one of Europe's most liberal abortion laws despite opposition by the Vatican and the governing Christian Democratic party.

Hours after the Senate voted for the new law Thursday night, the Vatican's semi-official newspaper, L'Osservatore Romano, said: "No law can transfer murder into a right."

The law makes abortion available virtually on demand within the first three months of pregnancy to women older than 18 and ends a four-year battle against the bill, which Pope Paul branded as "homicide."

Under the new law, abortions can be performed for health, economic, social or psychological reasons.

The bill was approved by a vote of 160 to 148. The Christian Democrats and neo-Fascists opposed it while the Communists, Socialists, Social Democrats, Republicans, Liberals and Radicals voted in its favor.

The defeat was not expected to affect the minority government of Premier Giulio Andreotti, who three days ago won an overwhelming vote of confidence in the Chamber of Deputies (lower house).

The new law also permits women younger than 18 to interrupt their pregnancies with the consent of their parents or guardians.

Abortions will be available after three months if a doctor or a board of consultants find the health of the mother or the unborn baby is in danger.

L'Osservatore Romano lamented the bill was passed so soon after the murder of former premier Aldo Moro and said it will only increase moral tension in Italy.

"The first legislative act of the Senate after Aldo Moro's death was to approve the abortion bill, fruit of that culture which has brought us to this chaos," it said.

The Christian Democrat leader in the Senate, Giuseppe Bartolomei, said: "This year of blind terrorism and the abortion law will one day be remembered as the year zero."

Trawler Nabbed By Plane

MILFORD HAVEN, England (Reuter) — A British air force plane Thursday claimed to have made maritime history when it arrested a Spanish trawler believed to have been fishing inside British waters.

The trawler, the Goizaldi Argia, was tracked from a Nimrod reconnaisance plane as it headed toward Ireland, and a British patrol vessel was sent to intercept the vessel.

A defence ministry official said it was the first time a ship has been arrested by an aircraft.

U.S. Won't Destroy Stock of Nerve Gas

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. defence department has decided to keep its stock of "Weteye" nerve-gas bombs, a weapon that causes quick and agonizing death marked by spasms and convulsions.

Defence officials said Thursday an earlier decision to destroy the 900 bombs was reversed by Defence Secretary Harold Brown, who ordered the bombs moved from a Denver arsenal to a storage site in Utah.

Brown reportedly based his decision on the bombs' value as a deterrent to Soviet use of their large stockpiles of gas in the event of war.

The United States and Soviet Union have been discussing a possible ban on chemical weapons, but the talks are stalled over several issues.

The 900 "Weteye" bombs contain about 155 tons of the gas Sarin, which induces spasms and convulsions in its victims.

The United States has a total nerve gas supply estimated at up to 20,000 tons, about half of it in bombs, artillery shells and other munitions.

Production of the Weteye bombs was halted in 1969 after nerve gas drifted from a Utah test site and killed 6,000 sheep.

The bombs were produced at Rocky Mountain Arsenal in Denver.

GANG OF 4 STILL ALIVE IN PEKING

PEKING (UPI) — Vice-Premier Teng Hsiao-ping of China revealed today the deposed "Gang of Four," led by Mao Tse-tung's widow, is still alive and they "will go on eating their meals."

In a wide-ranging interview with a group of editors and publishers, Teng said was asked the whereabouts of the radical group, which was ousted shortly after the death of Mao, the late chairman of the Chinese Communist Party.

One of the group's leaders was Mao's widow, Chiang Ching. She and her three colleagues are reliably reported to be under house arrest in or somewhere near Peking.

PEKING — More than a million Chinese who were accused of being "rightists" 20 years ago are being rehabilitated and gradually brought back into the national life thanks to the personal intervention of Vice-Premier Teng Hsiao-ping, reliable Chinese sources have revealed.

The sources said that Teng initiated a new policy toward the so-called rightists — victims of the fallout from the famous hundred flowers campaign of 1956 shortly before the convening of the National Peoples Congress last February. The policy has the approval of the central committee of the Communist party, but it was Teng who pushed for it.

The hundred flowers campaign was an attempt by the late chairman, Mao Tse-tung, to open up the party and government to criticism from the masses. When that criticism came fast and furious, it was quickly decided to be too far-reaching and was immediately stopped. This was followed by a massive purge known as the anti-rightist rectification movement. It has been estimated that nearly two million people were investigated as a result, including 5,000 party members.

Having been urged by the government "to speak out and air their views freely" these people soon found themselves facing a variety of penalties from prison to hard labor in the countryside. Inevitably, the families shared in the victimization.

According to the Chinese sources the rehabilitation program, which has quietly been going on for several months, means that former "rightists" will now be able to take up jobs and their families will have the stigma of the rightist label removed from official dossiers and files.

It is not by chance that Mercedes-Benz sets the standard by which other cars are judged. It is by design.

From the tips of the driver's fingers to the rubber on the road, every detail has a purpose. Form follows function.

You become aware of this design philosophy from the moment you first sit behind the wheel. The seat itself is comfortably firm; it is a driver's seat not an armchair. Instruments can be read with least amount of eye movement from the road. All controls are within easy reach.

You needn't even take your hands from the wheel to operate the most frequently used controls. Turn signals, high/low beams, headlight flasher, windshield wiper and washer are all on one multi-function switch a finger's length away from the wheel.

Also a finger's length away is a cruise control switch with a memory! Touch the switch to cruise at a selected speed. Override it to accelerate or slow down. Touch it again and the "memory" will return the car to the previously selected speed. Amazing!

A sure feel of the road

Superb handling traits have long been the hallmark of every Mercedes-Benz. You have an incredibly sure feel of the road as the car steps nimbly up and over bumps and around tight curves.

Zero-offset steering, the most recent advance in suspension engineering from Mercedes-Benz, assures firm, straight-line tracking under heavy braking. It also lets you track smartly through turns without axle tramp or sway.

In city traffic you'll appreciate the precise power-assisted steering system. The highest praise of this system may be that it seldom feels like power steering. You never have to fight the wheel but you retain that all-important "feel of the road."

Behind the grille: legendary performance

Behind the famous grille of every Mercedes-Benz there's a power plant suited to a particular driver's needs: ranging from the eminently durable 4-cylinder diesel to the sophisticated 6.9 litre V-8 which can propel our two-ton, five-passenger sedan from zero to 88 km/h in under 7 seconds.

Safety: both active and passive

Many of the passive safety features of Mercedes-Benz automobiles—rigid passenger shell, front and rear crumple zones, padded interior, collapsible steering wheel and column—were the basis of safety standards now governing passenger cars in many countries.

Of equal importance to a Mercedes-Benz engineer is active safety—the car's ability to help the driver avoid trouble. Performance characteristics, such as braking, steering and suspension, play a key role.

Why does Mercedes-Benz go to all this trouble? Simple: the engineers believe their job is to advance the state of the automotive art.

Engineered like no other car in the world

The engineers are the heroes at Mercedes-Benz and they have but one objective; it is to build safe, responsive, practical cars—with as few imperfections as possible.

This philosophy puts engineering ahead of petty economies and precludes the mass production of inexpensive cars. It allows little room for compromise or for shortcuts; just the pursuit of engineering excellence.

Complete instrumentation positioned to be read with minimum eye movement.
Bi-level climate control for maximum driver comfort and safety.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

On many occasions, if the best result is to be attained, one must resist the urge to create a trick for himself at the first opportunity to do so. In experience, the expert has learned to control this urge; the non-expert has not, if South's play of today's deal can be considered "typical non-expert" play.

Neither side vulnerable.
North deals.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	Pass	2 NT	Pass
3 ♣	Pass	3 NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Five of ♠.

East won the opening spade lead with his king, after which he returned the spade nine, South putting up the jack. West made a good play when he allowed the jack to win.

South next led the club jack, and finessed against West's hoped-for king. Upon taking the trick with the king, East played back his remaining spade. South Q-6 was now entrapped by West's A-10-8. When play had ended declarer had gone down one, losing four spades and a club.

Had an experienced player been in the South seat, he would have recognized that the danger to his contract was that East might be the possessor of the club king. If such were the set-up, then all efforts had to be made towards preventing East from returning a spade when he obtained the lead with his (presumed) king of clubs.

Thus, at trick two, in order to break the East-to-West line of communication in spades, declarer should not have put up the spade jack on East's return of the nine of spades. Instead, he should have followed suit with the six, permitting East's nine to capture the trick.

East would then have played back his remaining spade, and South's jack would have fallen to West's ace. No matter what West now returned, declarer would be home safely. He would take the club finesse, losing to East's king. Since East would have no spade remaining, declarer could then have claimed his contract, since the rest of the tricks would have been his. Played correctly, his only losers would have been the three of spades and a club.

"Those three kids your grandsons?" Bob exclaimed "You don't look that old."

Sam chuckled. "Maybe not, but you figure it out," he replied. "Fred came first, Dick was born 4 years later, and Pete 2 years after him. And you get just 7 times my age if you total the squares of their ages."

How old was he?

View Block Moved

A portable classroom recently added to Victor Street school will be moved because it blocks the view of the family who live beside it.

Greater Victoria school district administrators have decided to relocate the portable on the other side of the school, community relations officer Bill Stavdal said today.

The classroom was installed on the south side of the school Wednesday as a vocational workshop for senior students.

When the Wickstroms complained, school principal Dennis Arnsdorf told them he wasn't going to move the portable because of its easy access to the handicapped children who attend the school.

After studying alternatives, Arnsdorf agreed to move the portable to the north side of the school, Stavdal said.

Victor Street school is suffering from a space shortage and is at the top of the school board's priority list for a new wing, he said.

Victoria Violinists Chosen

Victoria violinists Mark Neumann and Paul Thompson have been selected from more than 600 who auditioned for the National Youth Orchestra.

They will be among 105 musicians who will form the 1978 National Youth Orchestra.

They will receive intensive training over a seven-week period, part of which will be spent at Queen's University in Kingston, followed by a session at the University of B.C.

Musical directors Kazuyoshi Akiyama and Uri Mayer will head the faculty of 20 distinguished musicians from Canada and abroad. The training period runs from July 9 through Aug. 27 and several public concerts will be presented.

Healthy Are Sexy

TORONTO (CP) — If elderly people keep healthy, they can be sharp-witted, spirited and sexy all their lives, consumer advocate Lynne Gordon said Thursday.

Ms. Gordon, chairman of the Ontario Council for the Status of Women, told a meeting of about 190 senior citizens there are many myths about old age.

"We have proof that senility is so much bunk, and so is the talk about a lowered sex drive as we grow older," she said.

"Age is only a problem if you are not healthy."

She said older people and women are overcoming society's labels and stereotypes and are being recognized for the contributions they make.

Hospital Hassle Kills Youth Jobs

The 300 students hoping to work in B.C. hospitals for the summer will have to look elsewhere.

The cutoff day for applying for government funding under the youth employment program was Thursday and the Hospital Employees Union and the hospitals were unable to reach agreement on the matter.

"As far as I know the money is gone," HEU spokesman Stephen Brewer said today.

"Under the program, the B.C. department of labor pledged to cover $3.20 for each hour worked by 300 students in hospitals this summer.

Labor Minister Allan Williams said earlier this week that if both sides couldn't reach agreement the money would be redirected into youth employment programs in other industries.

Two films dealing with traditional and Victorian England will be shown at an Oak Bay Library Branch tea party Saturday starting at 2 p.m.

The Central Library at 749 Yates Street, will also hold a tea party May 25, at 2 p.m.

Films to be show are A Set of Slides and two comedy films Balloonatic starring Buster Keaton and the Great McGonigle, starring W.C. Fields.

Campground Shut

A 217-acre, 400-site private campground at Long Beach will be closed for the Victoria Day weekend but will open on June 22, a Pacific Rim park official said today.

He said steps have been taken to handle an anticipated overflow of visitors at the park's public 91-vehicle campground at Green Point.

"We have additional space to accommodate camping vehicles," he said.

The closure of the private campground until June 22 won't cause any problems after the Victoria Day weekend, he said.

"Visitor attendance drops after the holiday and only starts to pick up towards the end of June," he said.

"The private campground will be open by then."

The problem of space only affects owners of vehicles. There is plenty of room for tenters at a walk-in beach tenting area in the park.

Earlier this year, Bert Braiden, Calgary developer and owner of the private campground, indicated he might close his campground for the summer. He wants the federal govenment to buy him out.

The offer is still being considered by Parks Canada.

Before the Judge

A 20-year-old man who fled on foot after a traffic offence on May 11 was told by Judge Harold Alder in provincial court Thursday that "you can be impaired by emotion as much as by liquor."

The accused abandoned his vehicle and ran away, later reporting it stolen.

He was fined $500, given six-months probation and ordered to pay $150 for the lamp.

★ ★ ★

An Edmonton man received suspended sentences after pleading guilty to charges of theft under $200 and false pretenses involving six cheques totalling more than $440.

Jack Waites, 23, was also given one year's probation by Judge Alder and ordered to make restitution.

Waites was arrested in Edmonton and brought to Victoria to stand trial on the offences that occurred between September and December last year. The court was told he was to appear on those charges in Victoria last January but failed to do so because he was needed in Toronto on an urgent family matter. Once there he tried unsuccessfully to have the charges waived to that jurisdiction.

Waites' counsel said his client had an alcohol problem.

★ ★ ★

The lawyer for an 18-year-old man facing charges of writing bad cheques in Campbell River earlier this year said his client committed the offences "out of financial desperation".

Thomas Johnston, 4579 Quadra, pleaded guilty to writing the cheques, one for $79.23 and the second for $201.68.

His lawyer submitted that a fine would have a deterrent effect on Johnston who had already spent three nights in custody.

"The process itself has had some effect on him," he told Judge Alder.

Alder suspended sentence but placed him on six months probation for the charge involving the lesser amount and one year's probation for the charge stemming from the cheque in excess of $200.

He was ordered to repay the two Campbell River businesses.

★ ★ ★

An 18-year-old already serving a six-month sentence imposed Wednesday on another charge was given five days concurrent after he pleaded guilty to breaking probation terms.

The charge against Stanley Steven West, 18, of 1736 Duchess, was laid in connection with a probation order accompanying a March 30 suspended sentence on a charge of theft under $200.

★ ★ ★

"What were you trying to prove ... that you don't like plants or were stronger?" Judge Alder asked David Edward Jones, 24, of 557 Paradise, after he pleaded guilty to a charge of mischief.

Jones told the court he had been drinking before he overturned a planter in Bastion Square Wednesday night.

He was ordered to pay $110.55 to the city of Victoria.

Jones was also fined $600 and given six months probation.

★ ★ ★

Gary Labouchan, 29, of 10293 Godfrey Place, Sidney, was fined $500 after he pleaded guilty to an impaired driving charge laid in connection with an April 27 incident.

Jail For 'Tragic Case'

A 23-year-old man was sentenced in county court Thursday to a nominal one day in jail for being unlawfully at large from William Head Institution June 14, and three years probation for breaking and entering and theft at an Esquimalt doctor's office Oct. 26.

Judge E.J.C. Stewart ordered Dennis Paul Tabish, as a condition of his probation, to attend and complete a heroin addiction treatment program at Adonis House in Kamloops.

Tabish, arrested July 10, was sentenced in Campbell River in 1975 to six months for forgery, uttering and breach of probation and to 18 months consecutive for breaking and entering, theft, forgery and uttering. He escaped from Jordan River camp and was sentenced to a further five months Jan. 5, 1976.

Defence counsel Malcolm Macaulay said Tabish feared returning to William Head without "certain goods" other inmates had instructed him to bring back while he was out on day passes, such as drugs.

He said Tabish had been warned to bring back more drugs, the money he was given, or not to return at all.

Tabish had tried on his own to break his drug addiction and was willing to take supervised treatment at Adonis House.

Although the prosecution sought a jail sentence, Judge Stewart said it was a tragic case and there were no facilities to cope with the problem within the correctional system.

Robert Louis Michelin, 54, who pleaded guilty to theft earlier, was placed on probation for six months and ordered to pay back $541.

Court was told he was working as a car salesman and deposited the money from a purchaser in his bank account and not the firm's.

Boaters Won't Sue Genstar

The president of the Tod Inlet Power Boat Association said Thursday the association won't take Genstar Development Ltd. to court over rights to occupy wharf space in the inlet.

Russ Stark said a Times report to this effect Wednesday created a false impression of what action the association will take.

The article quoted Stark as saying the association has retained Victoria lawyer Ray Bryant to fight the company — if necessary in the courts.

"On the contrary, we wouldn't go so far as that," Stark said.

He said the association is trying to improve its relationships with Genstar and wants to arrive at a mutually satisfactory settlement.

Genstar had originally planned to develop 22 acres of waterfront and put in a 185-berth marina adjacent to the development. Members of the association were to be given priority for space in the new marina.

However, the proposal was rejected by Central Saanich council.

Because of that, said Stark, the association has submitted a counter-proposal whereby it would get a foreshore lease and build the marina itself.

If Genstar is eventually allowed to put in a development, those residents would be given a preferential membership status up to a certain limit, Stark said.

He said the association is now only permitted to have a maximum of 40 members and that he'd like to see that expanded to 100 members.

Weed or Not, It's Useful

The large hairy leaves of comfrey grow rampantly on stems to four or five feet in height, the plant increasing in size each year. Because of the ease in growing, gardeners tend to call comfrey a weed.

Whatever you call it, this herb is valuable for several practical uses.

In a small garden, one comfrey plant will grow in two years to a size that produces sufficient leafy material to improve the soil in the vegetable rows.

Young new growths near soil level have been usable since early April as a green vegetable to cook with other leafy vegetables, but now the older stems seem in a hurry to make their pretty little drooping pink flowers. To keep more stems coming, it is necessary to cut off the flowering stems frequently. With their large coarse leaves, they go to the vegetable rows to act as a soil cover.

The 10 to 12-inch rough leaves in the lower part of the stems may be stripped off if desired and laid flat between the plants.

For best effect the soil should still be wet after watering or a rainfall, so that the leaves will soon rot down while they prevent quick evaporation of moisture. As the leaves are porous and definitely alive they cannot be condemned as keeping the soil cool; their dark color retains sun warmth.

However, as they rot, all nutrients in the leaves are returned to the soil where they act as gentle fertilizer to the nearby vegetables. The list of nutrients said to be present in all parts of comfrey is impressive — lysine, vitamins A, C, E and B12, as well as calcium, phosphorus, manganese, potassium, zinc and allantoin.

Several of these chemicals and minerals are found in seaweeds, notably kelp, and are believed responsible for the known nutritive qualitites of kelp as food for cattle, poultry and humans in countries which use products of the sea extensively. Kelp has also been used for centuries as manure on coastal farms in the same countries.

If we can so easily grow a comparative plant in a small garden and use its almost constant production to supply a rich manure, we may find an easy and economical way to renew our soil.

Comfrey leaves, stems and flower heads go to make compost in a heap with other "waste" material, from spring to late fall.

When November gales bring kelp to the beaches, it keeps the good work going until early spring starts comfrey into renewed growth.

When cutting the coarse flowering stems down for laying between the vegetables, leave at least six inches of stem above the soil. On this will be a growth bud which soon develops a new succulent shoot for eating, or to grow up into another four-foot stem of leaves and flowers.

I have never seen a seedling of comfrey around the place, but new starts of the plant are easily obtained by lifting a piece of young outside growth complete with a few roots.

The plant grows best when in an open garden space, although shade for part of the day is desirable in warmer climates. The roots penetrate deeply even into hard clay. It will need water occasionally during our dry weather to start the new succulent shoots but never give fertilizer. The roots bring up the nutrients which have leached downwards to the clay level and await the penetration of these deeply rooted plants to return them to the upper soil.

Comfrey, with the aid of moisture, breaks down a gelatinous mass. It does this when in the damp compost heap and when laid on the damp soil between the plants. A little raking or gentle hoeing then mixes the material with soil.

RESTORATION
LOVERS
The number of character homes in Victoria dwindles every year — some meet their fate at the hands of a demolition crew, while others lapse into such a state of disrepair that restoration becomes economically impossible. As a member of the Hallmark Society, and a licensed realtor, I would like to see as many of these homes as possible saved from extinction. If you are in the market for such a home, I have a list of properties presently for sale that fall into the heritage category.
If you presently live in such a home and are considering selling, I would be pleased to add your home to my list. So, whether you are buying or selling. Please give me a call, after all, preserving the beauty of Victoria is everybody's business.

HOW TO WRITE

A GOOD

CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your adveertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. for you daily, Monday through Friday: 8:00 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Sea Mining Showdown Averted

GENEVA, Switzerland (UPI) — The U.N. conference on the law of the sea ended its seventh session in five years today so divided over the question of mining the ocean's vast mineral treasures that no votes were taken on any specific issue.

But the 158-nation gathering, costing an estimated $1 million a week, decided it had made enough progress to hold further talks in the future.

A Canadian negotiator said the conference, by keeping discussions general and taking no votes, managed to prevent a showdown over ways of sharing the returns on deep seabed mining.

"This may sound like small beer but at least it permits motion rather than inertia," he said.

American officials remained doubtful that an international treaty will ever be achieved, even in another 10 years.

They made it clear to the conference that whatever happens, the United States will press forward with legislation to license companies to begin deep seabed mining.

While some progress was made on the central issue of authorizing, financing and sharing revenue from such mining, the officials said, it wasn't enough to "dispel doubts" about the possibility of an eventual agreement.

One U.S. official complained that 90 per cent of the participating nations were guided more by political and ideological than by economic considerations.

INFLUENCE PEDLAR SENTENCED

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — Businessman Hancho Kim, the first person to be convicted in the South Korean influence-buying scandal here, was sentenced today to serve six months in prison.

He had been convicted of accepting $600,000 from the South Korean Central Intelligence Agency to influence members of the U.S. Congress and then lying about it in court.

A Sea of Bicycles Inundates Tokyo

By ANDREW MALCOLM
New York Times

TOKYO — Japan is learning — the hard way — one of the burdens of being a modern, affluent urban nation: For every solution there is a new problem.

Five years ago the government and society in general became so concerned with the problems of urban smog, automobile fumes, traffic congestion and the energy crisis that, with the cabinet's endorsement, a movement was launched to use bicycles as a way of solving all of them.

The campaign really succeeded, so much so that the solution has become the latest problem. Every day millions of men, women and children pedal off to work, to school or on their errands. But when they arrive, having consumed no fossil fuel and emitted no fumes, they have no place to put the bikes, so they leave them anywhere — in the streets, by the tracks at stations, along fences, in front of doors, all over the sidewalks and crosswalks and on top of one another.

"It is hopeless," said Sgt. Yasushi Tanzawa of the police, surveying the sea of handelbars stretching before him.

The problem, inevitably called bicycle pollution, has ignited angry editorials and speeches, lots of committee meetings and a whole new rack of solutions. These include public-relations drives, parking tickets, loudspeaker lectures, tow-away zones and, of course, new legislation. None of them have worked so far, and the situation has given the Japanese pause.

"Right after the war," said Kanari Ebihara, director of the Bicycle Association of Japan, "everybody was too poor and busy trying to make a living to think of the bicycle as anything other than a vehicle to haul some freight. To ride them to curb pollution or for health reasons? That was nonsense."

But, Ebihara and others note, rapid economic growth and labor-saving devices, along with affluence and increased leisure, have changed attitudes and habits. For one thing, it is no longer considered unfeminine for women to ride. More important, Ebihara added in an interview, many people do not know what to do with themselves any more. "For the first time Japan has entered an era where people are looking for some purpose to their lives, as if they missed something during these hectic years of great growth," he explained. "In a sense we are now in an era of reconsideration."

Ebihara, who has a three-speed sport model, sees the bicycle as an integral part of the widespread search. Whatever its role, the bicycle is certainly widespread. From 10 million in 1950, the bicycle population has grown to 47 million, with 6.3 million rolling off the assembly lines annually, 16 per cent of them for export.

Commuting cyclists do not yet form the whirling phalanxes that spread across streets in such places as Amsterdam. Respectful of the menacing car and truck drivers who are claiming more and more bicycle victims, riders cling to the curbs in thin streams.

They usually centre on the railroad stations that are the hub of most communities, even the sprawling new suburbs where poor public transportation almost requires bicycles if not cars. Each of the 2,179 railroad stations has a neatly marked bicycle park that some riders use. "Do you see the white line painted on the sidewalk over there?" Sergeant Tanzawa asked at the crowded Kamata station. "I guess you can't see it for all the bicycles, but it's there and it's supposed to mark the legal parking area."

Guidelines Spelled Out For Rest Home Fire Laws

VANCOUVER (CP) — The provincial fire marshal's office and city fire officials have spelled out guidelines for upgrading fire safety mechanisms in rest homes, says Ken Collier, deputy provincial fire marshall.

Seven of the recommendations, including extension of fire and smoke alarm systems, sprinkler systems and automatic door-closing devices, have been accepted by the provincial health department's Community Care Facilities Licensing Board, and the board will consider additional recommendations at its meeting next month, Collier said Thursday.

The guidelines, which Collier described as a more precise definition of existing safety regulations, were drawn up after a fire April 7 in a Vancouver rest home which killed three elderly women.

At an inquest into their deaths, Coroner Glen McDonald urged provincial and city fire officials to push the government for laws to prevent future tragedies.

The guidelines, which apply to rest homes that were built originally for a different purpose, require that:

—Fire alarm systems shall be installed or upgraded to meet 1977 national building code standards and, under certain circumstances determined by the fire marshal's office, smoke alarms shall be installed in all sleeping rooms and recreation rooms;

—All vertical shafts such as stairways and dumbwaiters shall be protected in accordance with fire protection practices. Where stair doors must be open, doors shall have magnetic hold-open devices that close automatically on signal from the smoke detection system;

—All room doors shall be upgraded to stand up against fire for 20 minutes, already a standard requirement for newly-constructed facilities;

—Interior finish of walls and ceilings in lobbies and corridors shall be upgraded to meet National Building Code standards, using fire-retardant paints or fire-resistant finishing material;

—Emergency lighting systems shall be provided and maintained in accordance with the building code;

—A fire emergency plan shall be established and practiced by staff, who also will perform maintenance checks on equipment such as fire extinguishers;

—In special cases, where the building's condition or design prevents a reasonable safety level by following only the first six conditions, a sprinkler system shall be required.

MPs Unite to Decry Sentencing of Orlov

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons unanimously criticized the Soviet Union Thursday for its treatment of dissident Yuri Orlov, who was sentenced to seven years in a labor camp and five years internal exile.

MPs of all parties voted to "deplore the trial and extremely severe sentence" given to Orlov for "activities which in Canada would be perfectly acceptable."

The motion was proposed by Opposition Leader Joe Clark and seconded by Deputy Prime Minister Allan MacEachen.

Orlov was sentenced Thursday after a three-day "open" trial in Moscow which was closed to Western reporters and other Soviet dissidents.

Orlov a 53-year-old physicist, was a founder of a group to publicize Soviet failure to comply with the human rights provisions of the 1975 Helsinki agreements. He was convicted of anti-Soviet agitation and propaganda based on documents he wrote and distributed to Western correspondents and embassies.

The 12-year sentence drew heated criticism from other Western countries and the French Communist party said the verdict may "threaten the future of socialism throughout the world.'

In Washington, the state department said the United States "strongly deplores" the sentence and called it "a gross distortion of internationally accepted standards of human rights."

The U.S. House of Representatives passed by a 399-to-0 vote and sent to the Senate a resolution asking the Soviet Union to free Orlov.

British politicians from both left and right said the sentence was "shameful" and an "outrage." Orlov's British lawyer, John MacDonald, who was barred from the trial, said an appeal was being prepared.

The London Times says: "It is is sad to think that a power with so many achievements of which it can be proud should have found it necessary to descend to such shabby levels in the conduct of this trial. The result is a shock to Western opinion."

L'Humanite, the newspaper of the French Communist party, which is part of the Eurocommunist movement away from Moscow, says the sentence showed "a neglect of basic freedoms that could threaten the future of socialism throughout the world."

Dissident Pair Jailed

MOSCOW (Reuter) — Two members of a dissident human rights group in the Soviet Republic of Georgia were sentenced today to three years hard labor and two more years exile, family sources said.

Writer Zviad Gamsakhurdia and musicologist Merab Kostava, both 39, were charged with anti-Soviet agitation and propaganda — the offence for which Yury Orlov was sentenced Thursday to seven years in a labor camp and five in exile.

The sources, telephoning from the Georgian capital of Tbilisi, said the judge passed sentence today after hearing final speeches by the defence and prosecution.

Kostava, whose birthday was today, and Gamsakhurdia were members of a Georgian group set up by dissidents to monitor Soviet fulfilment of pledges on human rights at the 1975 Helsinki European security conference.

Grants Upgrade Facilities At UVic

The University of Victoria will share in $6.5 million aimed at improving the campuses of B.C.'s three universities.

UVic's dollar share is not known but approved projects include improvements to Finnerty Road, Ring Road and a service road including curbs and gutters. Playing fields will also be upgraded and further landscaping will be done on campus.

Work on all projects is to start immediately.

Education Minister Pat McGeer said today the projects will provide some 44,000 man-days of work at the three universities.

Funding approved by the Universities Council of B.C. is provided by the B.C. Educational Institutions Capital Financing Authority.

McGeer said the projects are essential but have been long neglected.

He admits the list doesn't satisfy all needs but it is an important start at a time when the construction industry in B.C. has significant idle capacity.

It's time to end the neglect that has characterized the physical plants at post secondary institutions, McGeer added.

More projects of a similar nature will be undertaken in future during slack times in the construction industry, the minister said.

City Backs Off Banning 2,4-D Spray in Parks

Victoria city council's parks and recreation committee backed-off Thursday from suspending the usage of 2,4-D by parks personnel.

The move, which went against the recommendations of committee chairman Ald. Robin Blencoe, came after parks administrator Cliff Bate tabled a surprise report saying he favored retaining the controversial spray.

Blencoe, who did extensive research on the herbicide before making his recommendation to council, admitted after the meeting he'd been stunned by Bate's report.

Blencoe said he had no idea Bate's statement was coming.

Bate said 2,4-D is an economical and effective herbicide that's used against new and established weeds on city lawns and playing fields.

"I appreciate Ald. Blencoe's genuine concern but emotions should not decide the selection of herbicidal chemicals for control of weeds in lawns and sport field areas . . . . Millions of people have a better standard of living today because of the use of herbicides in agricultural crops, and maintenance costs to provide playable sports fields and esthetically acceptable lawns have been greatly reduced by the use of 2,4-D formulations,", stated Bate.

"I would recommend that 2,4-D be retained as a herbicidal control within the Victoria park system until such times that it is proved detrimental to health."

That was just the opposite position to Blencoe's, who argued that the herbicide should be suspended until it is proven safe.

He said a full review of research material available showed that there were many unanswered questions about 2,4-D's environmental effects.

"I am satisfied from reading the (scientific) material on 2,4-D that there is reason for doubt," said Blencoe.

But Ald. Murrary Glazier replied that if that argument were applied across the board council should call for a ban on all chemicals used by the parks board.

"You're sitting there smoking a cigarette and asking me to ban a chemical," Glazier said to Blencoe. "There are a lot of dangers in nicotine (a poisonous alkaloid that is the chief active principal of tobacco and is used as an insecticide) and you ought to be inquiring about that."

Blencoe said in an interview later he intends to bring the matter before council.

"They were just playing politics in there," he said angrily, "and it bothers me that they would do that with such an important issue."

He said that although the city uses only a small percentage of the herbicides utilized in the city it is important for the parks board to set an example for others who use 2,4-D in weed control.

Spaced-Out Students Parents' Problem

Students high on marijuana or alcohol are the responsibility of their parents, Premier Bill Bennett said Thursday.

Commenting on statements by Vancouver secondary school teachers that up to a fifth of students come to classes high, Bennett said alcohol and drug abuse is a serious problem.

But the premier said even though the government has an alcohol and drug commission involved in information and rehabilitation: "I think the first responsibility should fall not on the government but on the parents."

Bennett, who has four sons, two still at home, said peer pressures and the desire by the young to experiment must be recognized by parents and they must take the time to give their children direction and understanding.

Bennett said he considers alcohol abuse a much more serious problem in the high schools.

The Vancouver teachers also said late-night jobs, drunken parties and family feuds which keep pupils up late also contribute to "spaced-out students."

Health Minister Bob McClelland said the 20 per cent figure is shocking and promised his ministry will continue with education programs.

"Hopefully we can convince coming generations that the lifestyles many of us have adopted are not good ones and are costly both economically and socially," he said.

McClelland said he opposes any move to relax the country's marijuana laws and disagrees with a proposal by the B.C. Medical Association and a recent suggestion by the federal government that marijuana use not be a criminal offence.

Poor Interest Of Bureaucrats Loses Interest

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal treasury loses an incalculable amount, possibly millions, in potential interest every year because civil servants collecting money from citizens don't put it in the bank fast enough, the Commons public accounts committee was told Thursday.

R. M. Dubois, assistant auditor-general, said during discussion of lax government money handling that many civil servants have shown a "definite lack of interest" when it comes to banking public money.

A study of a handful of government departments showed that money collected for various reasons often wasn't deposited for up to two weeks — in one case 28 days.

Since the government collects an average of $300 million a day, any delay in depositing meant substantial amounts of lost interest. Dubois noted that daily interest on $1 billion is about $219,000. The government ran a daily cash balance of between $1.2 billion and $4.6 billion, with yearly cash receipts of about $75 billion.

Treasury board regulations say civil servants collecting $100 or more are supposed to put it in the bank the same day they receive it. But Dubois said many send the money to central agencies or department headquarters for deposit, meaning a delay in the time the money could be earning interest.

TRAVEL FUND JUST A LOAN?

OTTAWA (CP) — The auditor-general has caught some civil servants using standing travel advances as virtual interest-free personal loans, the Commons public accounts committee learned today.

Spot checks in six government departments during 1975-76 showed an estimated $250,000 in travel advances were in the hands of civil servants when they shouldn't have been, R. M. Dubois, assistant auditor-general, told the committee.

The funds were being used in certain cases "almost like personal loans without interest."

Treasury board officials explained that civil servants who travel a great deal are given travel funds which they can draw on without going through the time-consuming process of applying for, and receiving approval for trips and expenses.

New rules required those given such funds to account for their travel within the first 10 days of each month.

Dubois, who studied government travel claims for the auditor-general, said most regulations affecting travelling civil servants have been "inconsistently applied or substantially ignored."

In an historic move, the Canadian Restrictive Trade Practices Commission this week started an investigation of law society prohibitions against lawyers advertising their services and fees to the public.

The Law Society of British Columbia has been ordered by the commission to surrender a number of internal documents, society treasurer and chief elected official Mary Southin told the annual meeting in Victoria Thursday night.

The action of the commission, a federal agency under the Combines Investigation Act, is seen by many in the legal profession as a direct challenge to their right to regulate their own affairs.

A subpoena was served on the society, returnable May 29 at the Vancouver office of the federal deparment of consumer and corporate affairs.

"I consider this subpoena a gross attack on the profession and a gross invasion of provincial rights," Southin said. She described it as tantamount to blackmail.

Southin said the Law Society, the lawyers' professional body incorporated under B.C. law, will fight this matter to the utmost and has engaged Vancouver lawyer Michael Goldie to represent it.

In an interview, she said she expects the society will commence an action in court to prevent the matter going any further on the ground that it is unconstitutional under the British North America Act.

The subpoena demands the production of such things as a list of the benchers, committees and rules of the society plus all letters, memoranda, notices and the citations issued by the society to lawyers Victor Stephens of Victoria (who is also the leader of the Conservative party in B.C. and MLA for Oak Bay) and Donald Jabour of North Vancouver.

Both lawyers were cited for conduct unbecoming a member of the society, a reprimand that will be included in their conduct record.

Stephens was cited for public interviews shortly after his new practice opened in Vancouver in 1977. Although he did not seek out the media or blatantly advertise, he did detail the new operation, its methods and fee structure when questioned by reporters.

He said later that the case against him threatened freedom of the press and would strongly inhibit freedom of speech, adding that there is a curtain of fear preventing many lawyers from speaking out on major issues involving the profession.

Jabour was accused of conduct unbecoming a member of the society after placing four newspaper advertisements announcing the opening of his North Vancouver legal clinic this year and quoting a sample price list and services offered in the ads and on an illuminated sign outside the clinic.

Jabour contended that advertising does not constitute conduct unbecoming to a society member and that society strictures on advertising are a contravention of the Combines Act.

However, said Southin, "We will have to see if the constitution of Canada protects the Law Society from the mandarins from Ottawa.

"There is in this sort of thing an implication that members of the bar . . . have less concern for public interest than politicians and civil servants, and that proposition I do not accept."

Separatist . . . At Midnight

QUEBEC (CP) — Are Quebecers really more "separatist" at midnight?

Finance Minister Jacques Parizeau thinks so.

He was questioned in the national assembly Thursday on statements he allegedly made during a tour of European financial capitals last December.

Liberal House leader Jean-Noel Lavoie read from a memo which he said circulated among Euorpean bankers at the time of Parizeau's visit.

"Regarding independence, the minister refused to make any predictions concerning the referendum which his government had deliberately postponed until 1980, stating jocularly that Quebecers are resolutely separatist at midnight, after a good dinner, but rather calm and pro-federalist at dawn, the morning after, when comes time to go to work."

Asked if he had truly said that, Parizeau beamed.

"Mr. Speaker," he said, "one of the reasons I can toss off such quips is that I have repeated them about 25 times.

Paratroops In Zaire

Times News Services

KINSHASA — Hundreds of French Foreign Legion paratroopers dropped on the embattled Zaire mining centre of Kolwezi today to rescue 3,000 whites trapped behind rebel lines in the occupied city.

Belgian Premier Leo Tindemans said in Brussels he had been informed prior to the action.

A French radio report said the paratroopers, reported to number between 600 and 700, jumped on Kolwezi with orders "to act like legionnaires" and clear buildings one-by-one. In Lusaka, Zambia, diplomatic sources said the French were dropped over the European residential area of Kolwezi and were securing a route to the airport, which was recaptured by Zairean troops two days ago.

A Zaire radio broadcast reported in Washington said the leader of the invasion forces had called for the destruction of the mining facility in Kolwezi and the "beheading" of the white population.

In Washington, the White House announced that U.S. Air Force C-141 cargo planes are being used to airlift French and Belgian military equipment into Zaire.

White House Press Secretary Jody Powell said the airlift now in progress involves a total of 18 planes, flown by U.S. crews. He said the transports are being used to carry ammunition, fuel, trucks and drivers to areas in Zaire "outside the area of conflict." He also said the planes are not being used to ferry French and Belgium paratroops to the area.

Meanwhile, President Fidel Castro summoned the highest-ranking U.S. diplomat on Cuba for a meeting this week to deny that his nation is involved in the rebel war in Zaire, it was reported today.

The New York Times said Castro met Wednesday night with Lyle F. Lane, the chief U.S. diplomat in Havana working at the American interest section under the Swiss embassy.

The purpose of the meeting, the Times said, was to rebut charges by Zairean government leaders that Cubans were participating in the insurgency in the Shaba province. The account said Castro was categorical in his denial to Lane.

Earlier Belgian news agency reports said the French had not informed Belgium of its surprise action. But Tindemans said he had twice been in contact with French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing about the rescue operation in Zaire's Shaba province.

In Paris, a French presidential spokesman announced that French Foreign Legion paratroops had gone into action in Zaire's revolution-torn Shaba province to "save the lives of the foreign citizens."

Father Gets Injunction Against Abortion

LONDON (AP) — A British high court, in what is believed to be an unprecedented legal action, has granted an interim injunction asked by a husband seeking to prevent his wife from having an abortion.

"I feel that the baby is half mine and I should have the right to say what happens to it," William Paton told reporters. "I want that baby more than anything on this earth."

On Wednesday, Paton's lawyers went to a judge in Liverpool, near the steelworker's home in northwest England, seeking an injunction to prevent Paton's 29-year-old wife Joan from having the abortion which she informed her husband she planned to have. The judge granted the interim injunction and ordered a full hearing of the case next Wednesday.

The day her husband went to court Mrs. Paton moved out of the couple's home, went to stay with her parents and instructed a lawyer to start divorce proceedings. The couple has been married four years and has no children.

Norman Jones, Mrs. Paton' lawyer, said: "She is not in good health and it is because of her health that she wants to have this abortion. Until we have thoroughly discussed the significance of the pending injunction she is taking no action."

New Banking Proposals Get B.C's Approval

Times News Services

New banking proposals outlined by the federal government Thursday are a step in the right direction, says Rafe Mair, British Columbia's consumer and corporate affairs minister.

Mair, who has been critical of large chartered banks, said in an interview he is encouraged with the proposals which relax the restrictions on new banks being established in Canada and with the stronger measures to ensure bank directors are not in conflict-of-interest situations.

He said, however, he is concerned about proposals affecting near-banks, such as credit unions.

Mair said there is a tendency for such institutions to lose their local identity when plugged into a clearing house system, as suggested by Ottawa.

The proposals, which would change the rules governing the banking industry for the next 10 years, were introduced in the Commons Thursday.

First responses were generally favorable among the companies that will be most affected.

But what all this means to the consumer isn't yet clear.

Moro Killer Hunt Nabs 2

ROME (Reuter) — Police have made two more arrests in their search for the Red Brigades killers of former premier Aldo Moro.

The arrests, in Turin Thursday night, came only hours after police here announced they arrested 10 persons, including a blonde woman they said fitted the description of a woman seen leaving the car in which Moro's bullet-riddled body was found on May 9.

Rome Police Chief Emmanuele de Francesco told a news conference that police, in three days of secret operations, also found two suspected Red Brigades hideouts — an apartment and a printing shop.

He said material found at the hideouts included an electric typewriter of the kind used by the guerrillas to write communiques and a printing press.

Meanwhile, a Rome newspaper says Italy's secret service believes Moro gave his Red Brigades captors political and military secrets and this has caused alarm in NATO.

Food Case Cheques Surface

The research co-ordinator for the legislature's inquiry into food prices says he has evidence of chain supermarket practices that if put before the public now would drive some people out of business.

Robin Smith said he has cancelled cheques, but cautioned that it will be up to the attorney-general's ministry to decide whether they establish any illegality.

Alex Macdonald (NDP—Vancouver-East) had told the legislature that Smith had cancelled cheques that are evidence of kickback payments.

Opposition MLAs have demanded a public inquiry into kickback and payoff schemes which some reports say add as much as 15 per cent to the cost of food in B.C.

Vancouver-Burrard NDP MLA Norm Levi said Thursday that the B.C. Broiler Marketing Board paid about $5,800 to large B.C. food retailers between February and May.

"The whole issue has been known for a long time," Levi later told reporters.

Smith declined to identify who turned in the cheques and to whom they were payable.

"They don't establish in my own mind any illegality . . . there's a big difference between illegality and immorality," said Smith.

He said he also has evidence other than the cheques but declined to disclose it even to committee members at this stage.

"If we took some of that stuff around now some people would be out of business," he said.

Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Rafe Mair said earlier this week that if supermarket chains are accepting kickbacks no provincial laws were broken and it would be a matter for the federal Combines Investigation Act.

Smith said Mair doesn't know what evidence has been uncovered because the inquiry's staff reports to the legislature's standing committee on agriculture and not to the minister.

"There's no way we would show any evidence even to the committee members until we are ready to present our report," he said. "It (the evidence) all has to be weighed."

Be It Sunny or Damp Get Ready for Camp

By AB KENT

In the nine weeks from July 1 more than 70,000 B.C. children will pack up and leave home.

That's how many youngsters will be herded, persuaded, shepherded and simply sent out of town for the Great Annual Camp Experience.

For some it will be a new venture, not to be confused with tents or mobile campers; for others it means an event as regular as the coming of summer.

At places with names like Lac-a-Mihnt, Ooshawama, and Lonesome Lake, the preparations for summer are in full flight — there are cabins to be painted, shingles to nail, boats to float, floats to fix and meadows to mow.

Weekend work parties have firmly entrenched their martyrdom as volunteers in the cause of The Camping Experience.

By now most of the youngsters who are going to camp this year will be registered at one of the estimated 70 non-profit church, institution or agency facilities to be found in outdoors B.C.

But while for many people in this province forest camps are synonymous with summer, they are not the hardy perennial so familiar to Eastern Canada where in Ontario alone there are hundreds.

Residents of the Lower Mainland and Vancouver Island are perhaps best familiar with the summer camp as an institution, since many of them are located within easy reach of the metropolitan centres.

Two of the better known are the Y camps serving Greater Vancouver — Elphinstone on Sechelt Peninsula — and Victoria — Camp Thunderbird at Glinz Lake in the Sooke Hills. There are also George Pringle Camp operated by the United Church at Shawnigan; YaWaCa Camp run by the YWCA on Salt Spring Island; Camp Squamish at Brackendale, owned by the Easter Seal Society; Camp Columbia, an Anglican camp on Thetis Island.

Two examples of non-sectarian camps are Strathcona Park Lodge, an outdoor education centre at Buttle Lake, and Outward Bound, at Keremeos.

Of the total number of camps in operating condition, 34 are accredited to the 90-member B.C. Camping Association, a voluntary organization that sets standards to be maintained by its member camps over and above requirements of the provincial health department's community care licensing board.

The expected total of 1978 campers is an estimate by Nancy Greig, co-ordinator of the Camping Association in Vancouver. Although it is nearly all children, the figure includes some adults who may take part in retreats, special outings, family programs and camps for the handicapped.

Youngsters are mostly in the 8-16 age group and largely on the younger side, Greig said.

Fully two-thirds will be attending accredited camps, most of which will be open only for a few weeks in the summer holiday period, a wasted asset the rest of the year.

Some opened during the Easter school break and will resume when the school year ends in June.

Greig said more and more are looking for extended season usage by winterizing the traditionally basic facilities. She said this is one answer to the high cost of maintaining property today, by raising income from business meetings, conventions or other public use in the off-camping season.

Winterizing means installing frost-proof plumbing and improving heating and insulation, providing extra custodial services such as snow plowing, or perhaps housekeeping.

Most have permanent buildings that lend themselves to winterizing and others have little more than draughty, unfinished shelters without plumbing, electric power or heaters, adequate for summer but expensive to upgrade for year-round use.

Among the association's conditions for accreditation are certification of waterfront directors as Red Cross water safety instructors, and they must be at least 19 years old. Leaders must have two years' experience besides university graduation and all necessary permits and insurance must be carried.

* * *

For member camps, all applications forms are uniform, and all camps must have one counsellor for every 10 children aged eight or more, and one counsellor for each eight children less than eight years old.

At least one counsellor or director must hold a valid St. John Ambulance first aid certificate; there must be properly licensed drivers and vehicles; health, sanitation and fire safety must be observed.

"We are covering not only what the Health Act specifies, but a little more as well," Greig said.

A member of the community care board said he could recall only one camp which had to close after failing to meet licensing standards, having operated a while on an interim permit.

Both the association and licensing authority inspect camps from time to time.

Camping associations believe parents should try to learn as much as possible about a camp before deciding to send their children off for the holidays.

Parking Tickets Slam New Moped Business

By DEREK SIDENIUS

Neil Patterson's new rent-a-moped business has run into a snag even before it's off the ground — parking tickets.

And it's costing him plenty. On Wednesday alone, he was nabbed six times. That works out to $60 in fines. Two of the tickets were for the same machine chained to a light standard in front of St. Andrew's Church on Douglas and left for several hours.

What really hurt is the owner of a 10-speed bike chained to the same standard didn't get a ticket.

"There just seems no way to satisfy them," says Patterson who set up his business in the parking lot behind Strathcona Hotel, 919 Douglas, only a week ago.

"The way things are going if this keeps up I'll be put out of business."

He says the problem is that the police classify mopeds as motor-vehicles and require them to be parked in normal parking spaces.

Patterson instructs riders to chain the mopeds to a fixed object such as a power pole or fire hydrant.

If the machines aren't chained, he says, someone could come along and walk off with them since they only weigh 85 pounds.

Patterson feels mopeds should be classed as bicycles for parking purposes and says he'll take his case to city council if necessary.

A month ago he appeared before council and won exemption from a licence fee which would have cost him $140 a year for each moped.

Council agreed to allow him to operate under a straight $30 a year trades licence.

Patterson, an unemployed carpenter and former navy shipwright, is sure the moped rental idea is a winner.

He's bought 33 of the machines and plans to expand to 100.

Last summer, he says, he carried out his own survey of American tourists in Victoria and found out their biggest beef was transportation.

The inexpensive, simple-to-operate moped is the answer, he says — as long as you can find a place to park without getting pinched.

Couple Blamed For Own Deaths

A coroner's jury Thursday night found a couple who died in a house fire April 30 responsible for their own deaths.

The jury said Catherine Dick, 21, and Patrick Jackson, 30, died as result of their own negligence.

The couple's nine-month-old son, Anthony, also died in the early morning fire that gutted an old two-storey house at 840 Bay.

The jury was told Jackson and Miss Dick had attended a party the evening prior to their deaths and were impaired.

Jackson had a blood alcohol reading of .26, and Miss Dick one of .28. The legal level of impairment is .08.

A passer-by rescued the couple's elder son, Gerald, 4, and a six-month-old relative, Marion Willie.

James McIntosh and Darryl Wilson, tenants of an upstairs apartment, jumped to safety as the fire engulfed the building.

Testimony given at an earlier hearing showed Gerald was in the habit of lighting fires in the house but his parents aparently thought they had controlled the problem.

Two Hit By Jolt From Line

A Saanich police spokesman said Peter Yurcuhak, 32, of 2393 Eastdowne, and Darryl Stephenson, 20, of 660 Atkins, were putting up the ladder at the Dominion Observatory on Little Saanich Mountain.

The two were taken to Royal Jubilee Hospital where Yurcuhak was treated for minor burns. Stephenson complained of dizziness but appeared unharmed.

"The next thing they knew they were lying on the grass," the spokesman said.

'Ivan, I've Got a Bad Problem'

A letter outlining the financial difficulties of an accused junior officer of HMCS Mackenzie was introduced as evidence at his court martial Thursday.

Fredericks, 29, former supply officer on the ship, has pleaded not guilty to the charges, one of which alleges theft of $3,520 in non-public funds by failure to account for them.

At the second day of the trial Thursday, military policeman M/WO Warren James Holm told the court he and an Esquimalt policeman with a warrant searched Frederick's home at 979 Thomas last Feb. 6.

Holm said he took a sealed envelope from a briefcase and asked Fredericks to open it.

Holm was asked to read its contents to the court.

The letter said: "Ivan, I've got a bad problem. It could quite easily be the death of me.

"It's dow (sic); money! I made a serious mistake that no one knows about and it's caused a shortage of money in the funds I'm responsible for on the ship."

The writer said he did not want to give details in writing or on the phone, but the amount $3,520 was specified.

"I've been covering it up in very illegal ways," the letter said.

"If I get found out I'll be court-marshalled (sic) and released. But to be quite honice (sic) I don't think I could wait around for that."

The writer said he had no means of repaying the funds and that he did not have five cents worth of credit.

"Life's a bummer," he wrote, "your (sic) my last and only hope."

Later he added: "Sometimes I think the easy way out would be the best."

Introduction of the letter followed a lengthy trial within a trial heard in the absence of a three-man disciplinary board.

The board re-entered the courtroom after judge advocate Lieut.-Col. A. K. Swainson ruled a quantity of evidence inadmissible.

He said he was not satisfied that statements allegedly made by the accused had been made freely or voluntarily and said there was a lack of information surrounding one aspect of the material which prosecuting officer Capt. Mel Hunt tried to introduce.

Swainson said he concluded the accused had not been properly cautioned during part of the investigation.

Capt. Bev Carey, staff officer for accounting services, maritime command Pacific, said when he began an audit of HMCS Mackenzie's operating accounts, he noticed a $3,520 discrepancy between journal and ledger figures and assumed a shortage of that amount.

The accused is represented by Maj. William Reed. The court martial continued today at HMCS Naden.

TOWN TALK

An unidentified shipping company took the sparkle out of the plan by shipping the fireworks to Toronto, of all places, instead of here.

Somewhat plaintively, the society says it hopes the public will turn out for the crowning ceremony of the May Queen Sunday night at 9:30 on the steps of the Legislative Buildings.

From the It-Could-Only-Happen-in-Victoria department: People out for a Sunday drive through the Uplands last weekend were intrigued to find that someone in such an illustrious part of town was holding a "Super Garage Sale."

Those who stopped by found that it was indeed of a higher class than the average garage sale about town — a uniformed commissionaire was on guard to direct the browsers.

Customers at Stewart's restaurant in Market Square have been intrigued by an unheard-of item appearing on the new menu — Stuffed Seafood Grapes.

But those with thoughts of a dish of large grapes each stuffed with a tiny shrimp have been disappointed when they asked about the item. It is, the staff explains, a misprint for Stuffed Seafood Crepes.

An ever-widening generation gap helped convince high school teacher F. Val Hinch he should retire early.

Hinch, an Esquimalt secondary school teacher, is quitting in June and one of the reasons he cited in a letter to the B.C. Teachers' Federation is the bad attitude of his students.

"I seem unable to alter my students' aversion to work, to stimulate their value of self-worth, or instil a sense of ambition and goals," the letter says.

"I am appalled by the way many abuse their bodies and minds with tobacco, drugs and alcohol."

"Their values are not mine and I am not about to accept theirs, so maybe I should get out."

"You may be pleasantly surprised and at the same time be doing everyone a favor — even your students."

He was bumped off a recent flight when he arrived 10 minutes before flight time to find his seat had been reallocated. He was told passengers must be there 20 minutes before flight time.

Bumped off an earlier flight the same day for the same rule was Norman Levi (NDP—Vancouver-Burrard).

Local water color artist Bill Travers-Smith has been elected a member of the Canadian Society of Painters in Water Color.

The artist, who lives at 590 Transit, was one of four new members elected to the society at its 53 annual meeting in Toronto May 6 from 17 membership candidates this year.

Candidates apply for membership or are sponsored by individuals. An artist must submit work to the annual jury exhibitions for two years to be eligible to apply.

Last year, Town Talk suggested Oak Bay council should pay tribute to the architects of the much-lauded Recreation Centre.

Ever since the centre opened more than two years ago, there have been plaques on the wall just inside the front door paying tribute to the various politicians who had a hand in the Rec Centre.

Council agreed with Town Talk that the architects deserved credit along with the politicians — and now a plaque for them has been added to the wall.

Former CBC Hourglass co-host Fred Latremouille has a new job.

He'll join the BCTV Channel 8 news team on Aug. 1 sharing the limelight on the 6 p.m. Newshour Show with veteran announcer Tony Parsons.

Ex-armed forces flyer John Taylor, 48, has taken over duties as chief pilot for the provincial government Air Services Branch.

He was promoted following retirement of Capt. Burt Toye, and can claim familiarity with a dozen types of aircraft following his air force experience — 13 years with the RCAF and six with the Royal Air Force.

Capt. Taylor, a resident of Victoria since joining the branch in 1974, spends about half his time in the air, the rest in administration, including the supervision of pilot training.

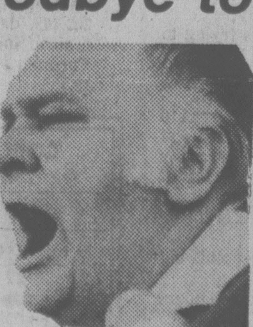
Guy's Goodbye to Heal Rift

There may be more to Len Guy stepping down as the secretary-treasurer of the B.C. Federation of Labor last week than he admits.

Labor and the NDP had a falling out after the 1975 defeat but the word is that the hard-line Guy's voluntary removal will pave the way for Gerry Stoney to become party president at the annual convention this weekend.

Stoney, president of the New Westminster local of the International Woodworkers of America union, is now second vice-president.

The election of a strong labor representative as president would be the final move in the three-year reconciliation process between labor and the party.



GUY
. . . paved the way

In 1976, just after the NDP defeat in December, Guy was defeated in his bid to take that traditional spot.

Some people within the party rumbled that Guy perhaps hadn't been as supportive of the NDP as he could have in the election a few months earlier.

Don't be surprised if he steps down so he can run in the next provincial election. He'd rather work in the front lines than in the administrative end.

Sign Language's First Musical On National TV

Susan Davidoff uses sign language in Sing a Sign

Channel Nine will broadcast two specials in recognition of Better Speech and Hearing Month.

On Wednesday, May 24, at 11:30 p.m., Sing a Sign, the first musical in sign language to be broadcast nationally, features dance, mime and poetry — taking music and song one step beyond hearing.

Sing a Sign was written and produced by Susan Smith with a cast of young deaf and hearing singers, dancers and actors, including Rita Corey, star of the National Theatre of the Deaf, and Susan Davidoff, who holds the title of Miss Deaf America. Bernard Bragg, the renowned deaf performer, is seen in a special guest appearance.

Other performers are Vince DiZebba, Donna Gadling, Ogden Whitehead, Rodney Johnson, Martie Stephens, Tracy Tuttle, and David MacFarlane. Musical numbers include the title song, composed and conducted by Steve Swab, with lyrics by Susan Davidoff, Vince DiZebba and Susan Smith. Other selections are "Fantasy," "All Kinds of People," "Just the Way You Are," "Little Arrows," "Candle on the Water," and "Welcome to My World."

For Susan Smith, 29, Sing a Sign is her long awaited dream-come-true, not only to showcase the talents of the deaf performers but to promote better understanding between deaf and hearing people.

The following Wednesday, May 31, at 11:30 p.m., Channel Nine airs The Silent Minority, a documentary exploring the active and varied lives of a number of deaf individuals and the common myths about deafness.

The greatest difficulty deaf people face is not their deafness but rather the widely held misconceptions about deafness. The public is large uneducated on this particular handicap.

The program introduces pilot Jean Hauser and medical technologist Jean Cordano. Both women have found paths to cope with their handicap and now are revered in their fields. Both the children of the Cordano family have hearing impairments but likewise have excelled. Mary, 15, swam in the Deaf Olympics last summer in Rumania. She hopes to attend Gallaudet College in Washington, D.C., the only college for the deaf in the world. Bobbi, 13, is also a top student at a hearing school.

Special on Bing

Bing Crosby's life and career went through many changes and many styles, but one thing was always the same—the warmth and humor of Bing himself. Bing Crosby: His Life and Legend, will focus on all the elements that made Crosby the successful performer he was for more than half a century. The two-hour special will air Thursday, May 25 at 9 p.m. on Channel 4.

CLUES ACROSS

4. JARS not jaws. JARS ARE characterized by a wide mouth, but jaws needn't be those of a notable wide-mouthed creature.

7. MINISTER not sinister. "MINISTER" is more necessarily apt, since the sinister nature of the villain may well be concealed for much of the time.

9. TAXING not taking. If a person simply doesn't work at all (i.e., avoids taking jobs of any kind), it is inapt to say that he will never suffer from overwork. Aptly, jobs that are TAXING involve possible overwork.

10. SLIGHT not alight. "SLIGHT" has the more pointed link with the clue's theme of a fire being extinguishable.

12. HOD not rod. Being essentially something to "carry," a HOD is more pointedly apt than a rod.

14. MOON not mood. The clue's references to night time, and to an open-air location, favor MOON more particularly.

16. NEW not net. Aptly, "NEW" carries the sense of being unfamiliar. Net prices are merely normal.

17. LOUD not lout. Since nobody likes a lout as such, specifying a "genteel" youth, in the clue, has more point for LOUD. Also, while a person may be said to be "inclined to be LOUD" (i.e., tending to be a bit noisy or vulgar at times), a "lout" is regarded quite uncompromisingly as a lout.

19. HEED not heel. A dog will heel, on command, if it has been trained to do so (it's not a question of co-operative attitude.)

20. ASIA not aria. There is no reason why the whole of an aria should not be enjoyed.

22. FATEFUL not hateful. Such a journey would certainly be FATEFUL. Against hateful, one may doubt if the victims necessarily had specific feelings of dislike for the journey, or whether their emotions were consistent or even ponderable in a collective way.

24. DREAD not dream. Since nobody would expect people to dream on a logical basis, DREAD is the more reasonable answer.

25. STUDIES not studios. The clue applies more aptly to rooms that require to be furnished, in the ordinary sense, like STUDIES. Studios hardly tend to be at all over-furnished, anyway, that the clue's comment about the pointlessness of doing so should be called for.

CLUES DOWN

2. KINGS not rings. Since the idea of ornate rings is natural and readily grasped anyway, the clue's reference to "pieces," these being "of a certain kind" (chess pieces?) can be taken as a pointer to KINGS.

6. SIGHS not sight. There is no reason to assume that the sight of children (perhaps quite happy and able to buy any candy they want) is of a potentially moving nature, as the clue implies.

15. RUG not rum. "Last longer" suggests a matter of ordinary durability, favoring RUG. Also, consumption of rum is more a personal matter than one of home management.

21. LEAD not read. The idea of having a "talent" for LEADership is quite apt. To read is a matter of learning.

SOAP OPERA SCENE

Casey Snapper's Love

By STEVEN H. SCHEUER

NEW YORK — Casey Reed, the spunky blond resident doctor, played by Roberta Leighton, on The Young and the Restless may put a little more snap in Snapper. He could use it: Sympathy's been running high for Snapper since his wife Chris walked out after losing little Karen, who was ordered by authorities to rejoin her parents, the Beckers.

Dr. Reed has been on the show for six weeks, but down in Florida, where David Hasselhoff, who plays Snapper, was greeted by 2,000 fans, devotees of the soap opera wanted to know if Casey was going to be Snapper's new love. Hasselhoff said he didn't know.

Fans refuse to believe soap actors are in the dark about the characters' futures, yet "Y and R" performers really don't know what's in store for them because creator-writer William Bell wants it that way, on the assumption he will get better performances.

Perceptive viewers may glean a clue from the size of leggy 5-ft. 9 Roberta Leighton, a blond, impish looking young woman from Minneapolis, who seems to be just about the right height as Casey Snapper. Roberta appears to have caught on with fans. The mail is encouraging, so her contract has been extended to 26 weeks.

At the moment efforts are being made to get Casey out of the white hospital outfits into something more sexy. That can only add points because Miss Leighton really looks like a California beach kid with a happy, friendly grin.

But grins and good humor are not "Y and R" staples. The resident Dr. Reed has problems. She doesn't like men. It seems Dad used to beat Mom up regularly, and the imprint sticks in Casey's brain. That spells trouble ahead for Snapper, who looks at Casey and assumes by her forthright manner that she is a "very together" character.

In any event, Roberta Leighton figures to jazz up "Y and R," following the departures of Chris's Trish Stewart and Brad's Tom Hallick.

Roberta was offered the role of Casey late this winter, having tested earlier for the chance to replace Lorie's Jaime Lyn Bauer during the actress' pregnancy.

In Los Angeles for two years, Roberta started out slowly, and recently shifted into high gear. Her real name is Roberta Leighton Weimar, as in German's city Weimar. But TV big wigs wanted the last name chopped off, something Roberta now regrets.

"I sat by a pool for the first six months trying to get my bearings," she says. Her first role came from a friend, an associate producer on Baretta. "The producers were looking for a massage parlor hooker," the actress explains. "I was too young in their opinion. After I told them to go out and look at the young ones on Hollywood Boulevard, I got the job."

Jobs followed in Switch, Barnaby Jones, Rosetti and Ryan, The Blue Knight and two movies, The Lucifer Project (yet to be released) and One on One.

So the angular youngster is on her way, ready to juice up the soaps and perhaps even write for it someday.

CHANNEL CHATTER: Chandler Hill Harben (Ben Harper in Love of Life) is devoting much of his spare time to his composing and recording in hopes of broadening his career horizons. Chandler has sent some of his tapes to various recording companies and he may be cutting an album before too long . . . The sexy Morgan Fairchild, who was Jennifer Pace Phillips in Search for Tomorrow until a year ago, recently made a bid for prime-time stardom with an espionage pilot titled Escapade, in which she costarred with Granville Van Dusen.

Edge of Night is continuing to pare down the cast of regulars and the latest to leave the show are Herb Downer (he was Dr. Dave Roper) and Robin Groves (she was Maggie) . . . Kathryn Hays, who always looks beautifully dressed as Kim Stewart in As the World Turns, is sporting some original creations by top designer Dominic Rompallo, who also whips up some of his creations for the First Lady, Rosalynn Carter . . . Soap operas have an ever-widening appeal. The graduating class of Erath (Louisiana) High School chose the theme of Search for Tomorrow as part of the music for their graduation ceremonies.

PLOT PORTENTS: Casey Read's teen-age sister Nikki isn't afraid of boys, judging by her problem on The Young and the Restless. Kay Chancellor's role in life appears to be thwarting Jill as Jay vows to hold onto Derek. At least Jill's son, Liz, is getting a break now that Stuart Brooks is coming out of mourning.

Don's defeat in the State Senate race continues to affect the romance between Craig and Marlena on Days of Our Lives. Margo needs all the help she can get from her friend Michael as she battles leukemia and static at the office. Chris is still in her corner, but has his hands full dealing with Mary.

There's a mood of status quo on Ryan's Hope, with all the characters either manipulating or being manipulated. Delia is using Roger, having moved in with him on a platonic basis. Jill and Frank are battling over his campaign while Rea and Seneca cool their heels waiting in the wings to pick up the pieces.

Action is the keyword in One Life to Live as Melinda injures her sister Dorian while horseback riding. Jim and Jerry are abducted by a pair of terrorists who have critically wounded Paul. It's almost like prime-time TV with all the shooting and screaming.

David Thornton is laid to rest in All My Children while Christina languishes in jail for a crime she didn't commit. Devon catches Brooke and Dan in the library, and they're not there to read the best sellers.

Louise is on cloud nine when Paul asks her out in High Hopes, but little does she know that she's second choice after Trudy has rebuffed him.

John Hearn's Collectibles

This is quite a collector's item. Clocks have been made in Canada since the earliest times but until the late 1800's they were crafted by individuals. The Hamilton company was the first venture into factory built clocks. It was established in 1877, later became Canada Clocks and went out of business in 1884. Hamilton clocks are rare and much sought after.

Did you know, by the way, that a clock is something which chimes? If it does not chime it is not a clock but a timepiece.

I want to put in a plug for Heritage Canada. If the steady stream of correspondence is any indicator, this column is read by a large number of people who treasure Canada's past and every one of them is a candidate for membership in this excellent organization. Heritage Canada was founded in 1973 under the patronage of the Governor-General to promote the conservation of heritage structures and natural landscapes. What is happening around your way? Is someone planning to tear down a quaint old mill to put in a hamburger joint? Heritage Canada can help. Has someone you know done an exemplary job in restoring an old building for which you think they ought to get a medal? Heritage Canada may well do just that in the form of an appreciative plaque. Wherever the noble edifices which proclaim Canada's proud past are threatened, Heritage Canada will rush in to their defence.

Between government funding and corporation endowments, Heritage Canada is already well financed. Membership is therefore more an important vote of support than a means of providing funds. Individuals may join for a token $5.00 a year which certainly does not cover the cost of the fine magazine which they receive quarterly. It is a well produced, well illustrated journal (and future collector's item) — trendy and good humoured under the fiesty editorship of Terry McDougall. Your $5 gets you the membership, plus the magazine plus news of what is happening in the 120 local branches — one of which is near you. But more importantly, it shows you care. The address is Heritage Canada, Box 1358, Station B, Ottawa, K1P 5R4. Tell them I sent you.

D. Craik of London, Ont. sends me one of those standard questions which I feel I have to answer from time to time even though I am repeating myself. How do you determine the value of old books? How do you go about selling them to collectors? How can you sell them as a lot to a dealer and get a reasonable price?

It's not easy. The number of different titles and different editions of old books runs into the millions. Any good used bookseller will have a private library of catalogues and price guides.

The answer to the second is to advertise — but your chances of finding your collector are remote. The answer to the third is that booksellers are not usually crooks but they do have to make a profit.

Reader's letters should be addressed to Collector's Item, c/o Victoria Press, R.R. No. 1, Lowbanks, Ontario, N0A 1K0.

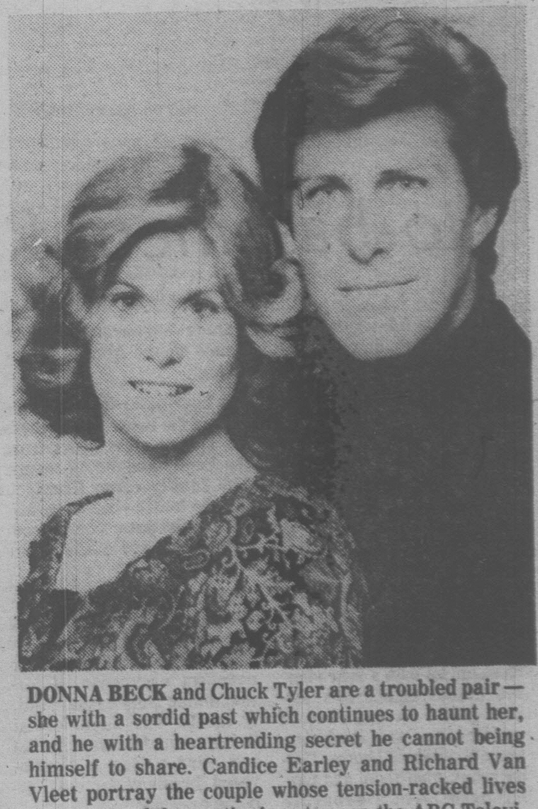
A Radio International first, he forcuses the story behind Monteverdi's production of the 7th book of madrigals, which he called Concerto, and its dedication to the Duchess of Mantua. In return for the volumes, she gave him a valuable necklace, and some years later when the composer's son Massimiliao, a medical doctor, had been brought before the Inquisitor for allegedly having read a forbidden book, he was saved by the money raised from the sale of that jewelry.



DONNA BECK and Chuck Tyler are a troubled pair — she with a sordid past which continues to haunt her, and he with a heartrending secret he cannot being himself to share. Candice Earley and Richard Van Vleet portray the couple whose tension-racked lives are a part of the continuing story on the ABC Television Network's All My Children, airing weekdays at noon on Channel 4.

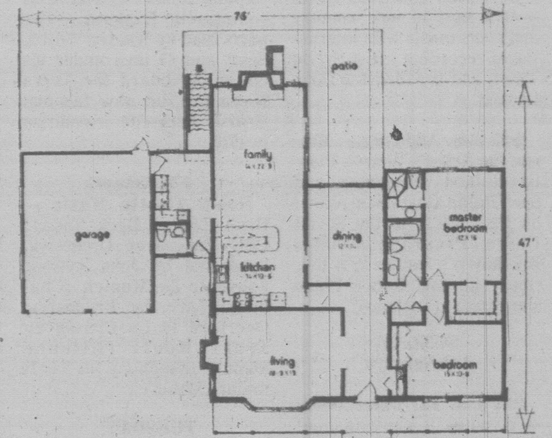
Width: 76 ft.



No-basement Ranch-style Home

From the full-width verandah to the simulated hayloft doors and weather vane-roof vent over the garage, this two bedroom, non-basement bungalow is the traditional country home come to town. Don't be fooled by the rustic appearance, however, as this home contains a list of convenience features which no country-home owner could ever imagine — not to mention the sense of spaciousness which this open and practical design achieves.

Ideally suited to the wide frontage lot with a rear view, the design emphasizes outdoor patio living, ease of maintenance and minimization of household chores. Utility room, mud room and vanity bath form a separate complex linking house and garage — separating maintenance chores from everyday living.

A huge patio surrounds the rear of the house, with access via sliding glass doors from the family and dining rooms. The family room fireplace has the built-in barbecue feature on the patio side for convenient relaxed meals in fair weather.

The kitchen separates from the family room via snack bar counter and from the dining room via pocket door for excellent separation of formal dining from casual family meals. The more formal living room features a wide bay window and a cantilevered fireplace for cosy at-home evenings.

Both bedrooms are large and have excellent natural lighting and generous closet storage. The large master has a three-piece ensuite bath with shower and full walk-in closet, both of which are accessible via pocket doors.

The double closed garage with quaint suggestive decoration completes the convenience feature of this country-style bungalow.

TV MAILBAG

By THOM MEADE

HOLLYWOOD — The TV Mailbag:

Q. I'd like to know what has become of Jack Albertson and "Chico and the Man?" It's usually on at 8:30 on Friday nights but has been missing for several weeks. What gives? — C.F., Warren, Ohio.

A. Nothing has happened to either Albertson or "Chico and the Man." Because NBC is about to begin reruns for the late spring, "Chico" has been preempted on several Fridays to allow screening of other potential comedy shows NBC says the show will be back this fall.

Q. Can you tell me if "The Fitzpatricks" will be coming on again? I think it is the best show I have seen. Why did it go off the air? — S.B., Victoria, B.C.

A. The weekly show was of course canceled because of poor ratings. And once a series is dropped because of poor ratings, that's it. However, you can vent your anger by writing to B. Donald Grant, vice president, programs, CBS-TV, 7800 Beverly Blvd., Los Angeles 90036.

Q. Whatever happened to Pamela Sue Martin on the "Hardy Boys-Nancy Drew Mysteries?" — H. L. H., San Pedro, Calif.

A. Disappointed because she was not appearing in any episodes, Martin left the series. She was replaced by Janet Louise Johnson.

Q. Whatever happened to Randolph Scott? — H.G. Victoria, B.C.

A. Now 75, Scott is retired and living in the same house be bought in Beverly Hills in the 1930s. He plays a lot of golf in Palm Springs where he invested in property many years ago with Charlie Farrell and Ralph Bellamy.

Q. I would like to know if Jerry Lewis and Dean Martin are going to make any more comedy movies together? — M.C., Youngstown, Ohio.

A. It is highly unlikely that the two will ever make movies together again. Since their breakup, each has pursued separate careers.

Questions of general interest will be answered in the column. Volume of mail prohibits) personal replies. Inquiries should be sent to Thom Mead, TV Mailbag, c/o Revue, Box 300, Victoria, B.C, V8W 2N4.

BOOKS

Pat Barclay

It's good to have a new book from Dave Godfrey. Godfrey was a highly visible presence on the literary scene in the recent past, winning the Governor-General's Award for his first novel, The New Ancestors, in 1970 and co-founding no less than three publishing houses (Anansi, New Press, Porcepic). But not much has been heard from him lately.

Now comes Dark Must Yield, a collection of 15 stories whose overall effect can fairly be described as absorbing and challenging (always), entertaining (most of the time), confusing (often) and irritating (occasionally). They can be recommended to the stout-hearted, the intellectually curious and the patient. Few triflers, in other words, need apply.

Much of what Godfrey writes hints at propaganda, but his intentions are usually artistic as well. He has himself acknowledged his early "infatuation" with the writings of James Joyce, which can be seen in his frequent use of something very close to the stream-of-consciousness technique and an ardent conviction that the richer the texture, the better. Readers who enjoy puzzling over wilful obscurities will meet their match in the work of Dave Godfrey.

Lest this sound a shade disgruntled, I hasten to explain that a reviewer who plans to have a book read by Tuesday, only to find herself still plodding along on Friday, is in a different position from the reader who is free to read at leisure. Dark Must Yield is a book to own, not to borrow, for it demands to be re-read at least once. Richness of texture has its logistical drawbacks, but it can be immensely rewarding as well.

The book is divided into three sections: "Tales," "Realities" and "Fables and Inputs." An acknowledgement page states that some of the stories are new and "others have been often anthologized," and provides "a reasonably complete list of previous appearances."

Best known is story number one, "The Hard-Headed Collector," which makes a fitting introduction to the book. Godfrey wrote it under the influence of discovery, after reading an article in the New York Times while a graduate student in the U.S. The article described an American art enthusiast who struck it rich with Ontario uranium and went on to assemble a "magnificent" collection which he presented to his country with the words, "I couldn't do what I did in any other country. What I did I accomplished here in the United States . . ."

(Many of us can recall precisely what we were doing the moment we heard the news that Marilyn Monroe or John F. Kennedy had died. It is the same with one's discovery of Canadian nationalism. I became a nationalist the day Herbert Norman removed his glasses, folded them neatly and stepped off the roof of a Cairo hotel. For Dave Godfrey, it was the article in the New York Times.)

Godfrey took the collector's story, fragmented it, and interwove it with a strange and charming fable about seven unlikely companions — carvers from the Queen Charlotte Islands — on a cross-country quest for "Egsdrull," a legendary tree. Mystifying on the surface and reverberatory below it, "The Hard-Headed Collector" is typical of the Godfrey approach.

Other stories become straightforward only after opening somewhere in the middle and moving backwards to their logical beginning. Their protagonists range from bushworkers to bureaucrats, for Dave Godfrey's range of character and subject is as wide as his grasp of technique.

Readers familiar with his work and career may be most interested in "East and/Or West," of which only a section has previously appeared in print. This piece, part essay, part childhood reminiscence, contains Godfrey's statement of his reasons for quitting Toronto and moving to, of all places, Victoria. "Regionalism," he writes, "is a necessary luxury . . . If you cannot move the centre, move away from the centre."

It is ironic that some of the qualities which distinguish Dave Godfrey's writing from that of his Canadian contemporaries may owe as much to his academic training in the U.S. as to his own fertile mind. The doctrine of bibliographical overkill, which seeks to define an artist's essence by sheer weight of footnotes is, once learned, not easy to set aside.

Yet Godrey's work is exciting precisely because it does manage to synthesize so many disparate elements into new and valuable patterns. If his future work should seem less clever, it will doubtless be because it has grown more wise.

DARK MUST YIELD: Fifteen stories, by Dave Godfrey. Porcepic. $12 cloth, $6.95 paper.

St. Mugg's Cleverness Obscures Issue

By TOM HARPUR

Malcolm Muggeridge's latest book, Christ and the Media, is a classic example of the motto: Seek and ye shall not find.

The title suggests that the Christian reader might well expect to find some new light on how the Church can understand and bring a fresh witness to the world of media. Instead, however, we find a three-part diatribe in which media are vilified as the tools of the devil, the embodiment of the Anti-Christ.

To be sure, the former editor of Punch magazine has not lost his mastery of English prose, nor his witty, satirical bite. But, his very ability to charm the reader can lull the uncritical into accepting what he says as gospel. The truth is that there is much less here than there appears to be.

Obviously, media, especially television, play a dominant role in our society and, with their many faults, it is easy to score points by alternately mocking and exposing them.

Somewhat — and rightly — embarrassed by the fact that he has spent all his life in various media roles and still continues to do so, Muggeridge continues to justify his ambiguity by an analogy which he has now used so often it is frayed rather than well-worn.

He says that as a TV performer he sees himself as a man playing a piano in a brothel, who includes Abide With Me in his repertoire in the hope "of thereby edifying both clients and inmates."

The joke generally gets a laugh at his lectures and, before the audience realizes that he has really explained nothing but continues to run with the hare and hunt with the hounds, he is off on another topic.

Supposing, he asks us, there had been four instead of three temptations of Christ. Suppose Christ had been offered network TV appearances in prime time to proclaim and expound His Gospel. Would He have accepted? Muggeridge is quite adamant that Christ would have turned it down.

But, here, as so often, his cleverness obscures the issue. St. Mugg, to use his affectionate nickname, seems to think that such a hypothetical temptation is on the same level as that of changing stones into bread or bowing down to the Devil in exchange for "all the kingdoms of this world." Clearly it is not.

MUGGERIDGE

It is manifest in the Gospels that Jesus used the best means of communication available to Him. He used parables or word-pictures which would live forever in the memory. He used a mountainside, a seashore, a boat as a pulpit in order to be heard by the masses.

St. Paul, the great communicator, deliberately took his message to centres along the great routes of communication in the ancient world. He took his message to the market-place of Athens and preached on the Hill of Mars.

According to Muggeridge, the TV camera deals only in fantasy and deceit. Unfortunately, the kind of critique he offers would, if carried out with equal wit and, at times even savagery, on lectures such as those recorded in Christ and the Media, destroy the credibility of the spoken word as a vehicle for truth as well. Lecturers can beguile and mislead as easily as electronic wizards can.

Only once does he refer with enthusiasm to a time when the truth "shone through the camera's fraudulence" in his own career. This was when he made a film documentary on Mother Teresa of Calcutta.

The light in Mother Teresa's home for the dying was so bad, Muggeridge relates, that everyone, including the cameraman, was totally amazed when the processed film showed everything bathed in a soft and beautiful light. He concluds that love has its own luminosity and that medieval painters who showed saints with halos were probably recording the same phenomenon.

Readers must make of that what they will. The message for Muggeridge was: The only real way to make a successful, Christian TV program is "merely to find a true Christian and put him or her on the screen."

Some "true Christians," however, would make dreadful television, as anyone who watches religious TV regularly can verify for themselves. Many Christians, in fact, feel that some of the telecasting of "true Christians" going on at present is cleverer in the pursuit of Mammon than corporations engaged in selling soap.

Unfortunately, there are those in church circles who regard Muggeridge as a prophet. One can only suppose that they have been so mesmerized by how he says things that they have failed to reflect on the content.

As an entertainer, he is almost without peer. As a theologian or even apologist for the faith, he is somewhat less than adequate.

CHRIST AND THE MEDIA, by Malcolm Muggeridge. Eerdmans. $6.95.

Von Daniken Reaches a New Low

By JULIAN REID

Did visitors from other worlds walk the Earth thousands of years ago? Did they act as midwives at the birth of human civilization? And could they conceivably have left some message behind them — an open invitation, perhaps, to join them among the stars and enter at last into our cosmic birthright?

Perhaps. After all, such science-fictional speculations are by no means inherently absurd. Indeed, there are actually a few tantalizing fragments of evidence (myths, documents, even artifacts) which can be tentatively, though by no means unambiguously, viewed as supporting such notions — though none of this material, alas, is anything more than tantalizingly suggestive.

Such speculations are customarily associated with their best-publicized proselytizer, Erich von Daniken. But even if, at some point in the future, they solidify into living certainties, little if any of the credit will be due to this author — who, for the record, is neither the instigator of the "ancient astronauts" theory nor the originator of one single meaningful argument in favor of it.

A case in point is his latest book, According to the Evidence, a characteristically vainglorious and tedious blend of self-serving paranoia and misdirected muddleheadedness. Here, at last, von Daniken promises final and irrefutable "proof" for his contentions, in the form of what he himself characterizes as "a thick chain of circumstantial evidence."

But alas, if his peculiar conception of what comprises acceptable "proof" was endorsed by the courts of the realm, miscarriages of justice would be the rule rather than the exception!

All things considered, According to the Evidence is an unusual noisome pill to stomach, even for a von Daniken creation. At best, the "evidence" it has to offer is unoriginal though moderately suggestive; at worst, it is almost laughably misconceived. Inept, turgid, and wearisomely wordy, this may well be Erich von Daniken's worst book to date — which, considering some of its predecessors, is quite an achievement!

ACCORDING TO THE EVIDENCE: My Proof of Man's Extraterrestrial Origins, by Erich von Daniken. Methuen. $13.95.

Some are treated worse than animals

The Shame of Our Prisons

By WALT KELLYTHORNE

Dostoyevsky, four years in a Tsarist prison, believed a society's character was revealed by its treatment of its prisoners. By that criterion, our own has much in common with the brutal despotism exercised by rulers terrified of their subjects.

What else but deadly fear can explain — if anything can — the horrifying reality of the Canadian prison system?

At Millhaven in Ontario prisoners have been attacked in their cells with dogs, teargassed, routinely shackled and beaten, chained to their walls beyond reach of toilet or tap.

In British Columbia some prisoners have spent more than two years in solitary confinement in conditions decreed "cruel and unusual" by the Supreme Court, in conditions that do not even meet United Nations or Geneva Convention standards for the treatment of prisoners.

* * *

"You wouldn't treat an animal like that," a member of the Commons Subcommittee which toured our prisons last year said. "They'd die."

Some do; more, however, manage to live somehow and make noises about their lives inside. Prisoners by the dozen spoke to the touring group, and this book is one man's impressions of the tour.

"Coming out of one prison outraged," Gerard McNeil writes, "I found myself thinking that I would renounce my citizenship, move out of the country . . . We found ourselves trying to convince tolerant but unbelieving friends of what we had seen. But we could hardly believe it ourselves."

No one knows exactly how many prisoners inhabit our jails; approximately one in every thousand Canadians is a prisoner. Once inside a citizen is faced with a bewildering tangle of rules set by a number of federal and provincial bureaucracies which are often in conflict with each other.

The National Parole Board, for example, has the power to revoke parole even after a sentence expires. If it suspects a person on parole may commit a crime, it can send that person back for the remainder of their sentence — plus the time won outside. Thus many prisoners end up serving longer sentences than those set by the courts which originally convicted them — and all without, perhaps, committing a new crime!

More confusion results when trade certificates earned in federal prisons are declared invalid if a prisoner tries to get a job outside. Provinces set their own standards and regulations for trades, and simply don't recognize skills earned in federal jails.

* * *

Work programs are almost nonexistent in this country anyway. What work there is does little to enhance a prisoner's self-respect, and wage scales are so low as to be practically meaningless. Although a Royal Commission recommended more than 60 years ago an industrial work shop program for our prisons, the few that do exist today are "woefully inefficient," the present Subcommittee reported. And throughout our system union contracts and rules forbid prisoners using skills they may have acquired before incarceration.

In prison the guards are the effective manipulators and controllers of day-to-day reality. They are fearful of their charges, resentful of bureaucratic moves they feel expose them to retaliation, suspicious of what they regard as ignorant propositions advanced by outsiders concerned more with prisoners' rights than the safety and efficiency of the men who have been hired to protect us from those prisoners.

It become difficult, ultimately, to separate prisoner and guard. Both become shaped by their experience inside, and the shaping is rarely for the better.

Gerard McNeil does not, unfortunately, examine too closely the role of guardianship in our prisons, and confines his analysis to basically hostile and negative comments on what he observed himself and what was reported to him by the prisoners he spoke to.

The Commons Subcommittee which toured our prisons came up with few practical suggestions for improving life behind bars; what bureaucratic measures it did propose were quickly smothered in government assurances that measures had already been, or soon would be, taken. The future they — and we — were promised would be rosy.

And so it may be — from the flames of burning walls. The air inside our prisons is volatile, and a reading of Cruel and Unusual will convince no one it's not going to explode again. It's our shame that it will.

CRUEL AND UNUSUAL: The Shocking Reality of Life Behind Bars in Canada, by Gerard McNeil with Sharon Vance. Deneau and Greenberg. $6.95.

The Battle for Pelts

By LESLIE DREW

The story of the white man's initial impact on the Pacific Northwest Coast will always be a fascinating one, if only for what it tells us about human nature. It is basically a story of commercial greed.

The white man came for pelts of the sea otter, the creature clad in what has been called the most beautiful fur known to man. Russian traders ruthlessly pursued the trade in the beginning, and Euro-American traders came later, in the wake of Captain Cook.

The stakes were high. In a single season a trader could amass enough of the highly-prized pelts to make a fortune selling them in Canton.

At the same time, in a few short years, the trade changed the native way of life irreversibly — and doomed the sea otter.

By 1800 the trade was firmly in the hands of Bostonians. The men they sent to the the Northwest Coast had only one mission — to pick up as many pelts as possible in the shortest time, and get away with their ships intact. They were accountable to no one but the ships' owners thousands of nautical miles away.

If the natives seemed unfriendly, you used brute force. You seized a chief or two, clapped them in irons, and ransomed them for their skins. You exploited animosities between tribes, practised deception shamelessly, and at the slightest sign of opposition, if you were an alert captain worth your salt, you sent men into the rigging with blunderbusses ready to fire on men, women and children in the canoes below.

Eye for eyed

The natives, whose own code of conduct demanded an eye for an eye, reacted in the only way they could. They became as wily as the whites in their dealings, and avenged wrongs at the first opportunity.

For the intruders' part, William Sturgis was apparently one who regretted the most serious outrages. He deplored the means by which "some people, not worthy of the name of Men (and who I thank Heaven cannot call themselves American) took to make their fortunes." The educated Scotsman Dr. John Scouler, visiting the north coast as a ship's surgeon in 1825, took a different view of which intruders were the most unscrupulous. He observed that "with respect to atrocity, they (the Americans) can outdo the Indians."

Journals surviving from the days of Yankee trade supremacy on the Northwest Coast give a fairly clear idea of what went on; although one suspects that some of them underwent severe editing before they reached the eyes of God-fearing New Englanders.

'Green hand'

The Journal of William Sturgis makes better reading today than many others because Sturgis steered fairly clear of interminable, vague descriptions and weather notes. He was only 17 — "a green hand before the mast" — when he carried out his duties board the Eliza in Alaskan and Queen Charlotte Islands waters in 1799, on his first visit to Tlingit and Haida territory, and his journal reflects a youthful enthusiasm for strange sights and adventures in a region barely known to the outside world. At the same time, it shows that he was already developing the sharp business instincts that were to make him a principal in the merchant shipping firm of Bryant and Sturgis and, in later life, a member of the Boston establishment.

S.W. Jackman, professor of history at the University of Victoria, has done an excellent job in editing the Sturgis journal for publication. In his introduction he gives a vivid picture of the writer's life and times. In the footnotes he is especially careful to explain nautical terms, many of them long out of use. The only disappointment for those wishing to follow the Eliza's movements closely is that he hasn't given the accepted spellings and locations of place names mentioned by Sturgis (for example, in the case of the Queen Charlottes, Keustat surely was Kiusta, and Tatance, Dadens).

A "definitive" book on the sea-otter trade era — the ships that pursued the trade, the men who took part (white and native) and their performance, and what happened to the furs once they reached China — has yet to be written. When it is, the young William Sturgis will be a contributor to the record. Meanwhile, his journal stands as a valuable, if isolated, addition to the Northwest bookshelf.

THE JOURNAL OF WILLIAM STURGIS, edited with an Introduction and Notes by S.W. Jackman. Sono Nis. $5.95.

Many moons ago, when I was a young Fleet Street reporter, I was sent to the London Zoo in Regent's Park to find out the cause of the sudden death of a chimpanzee which had been the most popular public favorite for several years. The man I interviewed was a young South African, recently qualified in Britain as a medical doctor, who was the zoo's research anatomist. He had carried out the post mortem. My concern was to get the complicated medical facts straight; his concern was that I should spell his name correctly.

As a precaution, I typed his name in capital letters and, thanks to a slack sub-editor, that's how it appeared in the paper. In gratitude, the delighted scientist became a useful news contact.

The man's name was Solly Zuckerman, now Professor Lord Zuckerman. I recalled that incident this week when I received his autobiography, From Apes to Warlords. It's amusing to note that he hasn't changed fundamentally. The book contains far too many pictures of himself, one each of Mountbatten and Tedder — both inscribed to him, and the reader is left in no doubt as to who really won the war. That's right, the war, the Second World War. But first, let's return to the zoo.

While there, he received a lot of attention for a book he wrote called The Social Life of Monkeys and Apes. It is now accepted that the social life of captive animals bears no resemblance to their behavior in the wild, but Professor Lord Zuckerman won't have it. He doesn't state why, he just scoffs at Konrad Lorenz, Desmond Morris, Jane Goodall and others and labels them pseudo-scientists. Their crime of course is to have proved him wrong, and that kind of insolence he never would tolerate.

Being a primate in a zoo is a dead end, so in due course Solly Zuckerman took himself off to Oxford University where he fiddled about teaching zoology and experimenting on animals. He looked like becoming a faceless academic. Then came 1939 and our hero, like countless others, was saved from oblivion by the actions of Hitler.

The government fully expected massive air-raids on British cities, so Zuckerman's offer to look into defensive tactics was eagerly accepted. The government called it "an investigation into the wounding mechanisms of exploding weapons." Zuckerman called it "an enquiry into the biological effects of explosions." In basic English, what happens when bomb meets man? Zuckerman had been clever enough to find a subject that had never been scientifically investigated, and at a moment when politicians were very receptive.

Bombs provided Human material

At first animals were used, but within a year German bombers obligingly supplied plenty of human experimental material and a national field survey of bomb casualties was authorized. Zuckerman, whose specialty was writing papers, compiled some impressive reports, and the next thing he knew he was involved in offensive bombing policy.

The next few years were exciting ones for the ambitious Zuckerman who, though a civilian, was able to wander into any military camp in any war theatre, rather as Pierre Besoukhov does in Tolstoy's War and Peace. All doors were open because he had come under the protective wing of Air Chief Marshal Arthur Tedder.

The book is essentially an account of just another odd wartime activity, but when we get to 1944 the story suddenly becomes dramatic. The invasion of Europe is imminent and Zuckerman, backed by Tedder and Eisenhower, makes the case for the dislocation by bombing of the French railroad network. The opposition is formidable.

Arthur "Bomber" Harris wants to continue the massive area bombing of German cities, and he is backed by Chief of Air Staff Charles Portal, senior American officers, the ubiquitous Professor Lindemann — and Churchill.

The best passage in the book — and to me the most terrifying — is a description of a midnight conference in the Admiralty's famous basement map room. On one side of the table sits Churchill, Lindemann, Attlee and Eden, and on the other the service chiefs and their respective advisers, including Zuckerman, who argues the tactical importance of bombing in France to hinder the enemy's counter-attack in Normandy.

Churchill menace Made him sick

Churchill, supported by Attlee and Eden, insists on the continuation of the terror bombing of German cities, including those with no industry, as he is concerned about political consequences that could follow death and injury of French civilians. One British air marshal who was present told Zuckerman afterwards that Churchill's "overwhelming menacing power" had made him physically sick.

Eventually, an unsatisfactory compromise was reached. But the war was needlessly prolonged and the senseless and vindictive destruction from the air was not halted until the hostile reaction in England to the obliteration of Dresden recalled even Churchill to his senses.

What good Zuckerman did is difficult to determine. As scientific adviser responsible for planning and analysis of air operations he proffered only sound suggestions, according to his own account of course. Whenever the Allies failed, he makes clear, it was because they failed to heed his advice.

Viewing the human comedy in a detached way I find a crazy logic in the fact that while the Nazis were liquidating the Jews, Zuckerman, a Jew, was scientifically devising more effective ways of destroying Germans, for which he was amply rewarded. In 1946 he was granted a peerage and the Order of Merit; in 1955 he became honorary secretary of the Zoological Society of London; in 1959 chief scientific adviser to the British Ministry of Defence; and in 1964 chief scientific adviser to the British government.

He tells his story with immense self-satisfaction. And well he might. He's come a long way since I first met him in a little shed at the London Zoo. Working with dead animals and dead people has made him famous, and no one ever spells his name incorrectly. The dealer in wholesale death and destruction who recounts his story with engaging immodesty is now rich in worldly honors.

There must be a moral in this somewhere, but it escapes me.

* * *

I mentioned, you'll recall, that one of the strongest proponents of terror bombing was Charles Portal, Britain's wartime chief of air staff. He became Marshal of the Royal Air Force Viscount Portal of Hungerford, KG, GCB, OM, etc., etc.

PORTAL . . . killer instinct

Portal, a very private man indeed, was the only leading Second World War commander who didn't write his memoirs. Now, Denis Richards has written the biography of this enigmatic person. I began it with an open mind and finished it with an intense dislike of Portal, and the fact that it is fulsomely eulogistic is only part of the reason.

For the first time I find I cannot be truly unbiased about a book. In fact, I find it difficult to even write about this one. Portal was brave (DSO and bar, MC) and brilliant, but to me he emerges from this biography as utterly repellent. Cold, calculating, controlled. Not entirely human.

Treated staff Like robots

He rose to the top on his merits and his career was outstanding, but to me he will forever remain a man who hunted and fished for the pleasure of the kill not the chase; a lifelong falconer — and I regard falconry as a diabolical pastime; a taciturn, unemotional man whose control of others stemmed in part from his ability to make do with a mere four hours of sleep a night; a man who throughout the war always lunched alone; a man devoid of humor or sympathy who treated his staff like faceless robots.

Portal commanded Churchill's respect and affection like no other officer. "Portal had everything", was his verdict. 'Everything' needs to be defined. Certainly, what this calm, master-mind of terror bombing did have in abundance was the ruthless killer instinct that Churchill so greatly admired. They were birds of a feather. Hawks.

The Jim Crow Squadron

By FRED BARNES

The flow of books on the Second World War seems unending, and amazingly much new ground is broken, as in the case of this interesting novel about the only black squadron in the U.S. Air Force.

Formed as a token group of elite officers in the hope that it might inspire more blacks to join the armed forces at a time when the U.S. found itself suddenly and unexpectedly catapulted into a two-front war, the unit quickly finds action in the Mediterranean area. Eventually the squadron moves to Europe to meet the world's first jets as the Germans phase in this major surprise.

The name Homestead Grays comes from the old Negro baseball league, where the Grays were the Pittsburgh entry. This jim crow outfit, which had many players as good or better than the major leagues, typifies the reception that the squadron received from white fliers. In this day and age the depth of feeling is rather hard to believe. The blacks, sent out to escort bombers, find themselves reviled by radio and warned off with bursts of machine-gun fire by airmen who would rather be killed by Germans than protected by blacks.

The squadron commander is Lieut.-Col. Jonathon Fremont, a career officer who built the squadron from scratch, trained them and took them into action. His greatest cross to bear is Lieut. Horace Walker, the soul of the squadron, the man all the other officers and enlisted men look up to. When he becomes one of the leading aces as well, Fremont's problems are compounded. Yet the unit, rebels to a man, eventually is molded into a crack fighting unit.

THE HOMESTEAD GRAYS, by James Wylie. Longman. $12.95.

Captain Cook Plaques

The Cook Centennial

Today and Two Hundred Years Ago

1778 - 1978

This plaque is a symbolic representation to commemorate the voyage of Captain Cook, R.N., who visited the North West Coast of the American continent with the "RESOLUTION" and the "DISCOVERY" in 1778.

On 29th, March 1778 Captain Cook arrived at Nootka Sound on the west coast (now Vancouver Island, British Columbia). This landing subsequently led to the establishing of the fur trade in British Columbia for Great Britain.

As the British Columbia Provincial Government is celebrating the two hundredth year of Captain Cook's landing, the Parliament Buildings have been shown in this plaque.

Details of the ships were taken from contempary illustrations made by the crew members and Admiralty records. The "RESOLUTION" was a square rigged vessel of approximately one hundred and eleven feet in length, with a beam of thirty-five feet and four hundred and sixty-two tons.

This plaque was made from a sculpture by John Ritchel, whose work has been exhibited at various galleries across Canada, including the National Gallery, Ottawa, Canada, after which he was elected a member of the Sculpture Society of Canada.
